ANOTHER BRITISH BATTLESHIP LOST IN THE DARDANELLES

CANADIANS AND INDIANS BLOCK GERMAN ATTACK

Canadian Losses Reported Heavy.

It is reported that the Canadian division on active service has again been in action since the fighting of last week when they captured a strong position held by the Germans. While no official statement has been made, reports are to the effect that the losses have been heavy and will total in the neighborhood of 1000.

London, May 26th—Canadian and Indian troops on Tuesday night successfully repulsed at the point of the bayonet a vigorous German attack near Richebourg. Having destroyed the British wire defences by means of terrific artillery fire the enemy launched a strong attack and succeeded, despite severe losses suffered in the open, in reaching our trenches.

"Here" says a Central News message, "they were met with an inferno of rifle and machine gun fire, before which they wavered." Then the Canadians and Indians leaped from the trenches and met the German reserves with the bayonet. As the latter swarmed up to strengthen the thin first line the colonials, fighting with terrific vigor, simply paralyzed the attack of the enemy, who were pursued into the open. Our losses were heavy, but the defeat suffered by the Germans was severe both morally and materially. The progress made justifies the belief that the German hold on the region of La Basse will very soon become untenable, and will necessitate a withdrawal to a new line of defence.

Another British Battleship Sunk.

London, May 27th—The Admiralty makes the following announcement:

"While operating yesterday in support of the Australians and New Zealanders off the shore of the Gallipoli Peninsula, H. M. S. Triumph, Capt. Maurice Fitzmaurice, was torpedoed by a submarine and sank shortly afterwards. A majority of the officers and men are reported to have been saved, including the Captain Commander.

"The submarine was chased by destroyers and patrolling craft till dark."

The British battleship Triumph was built at Barrow in 1902 for the Chilean Government, but was purchased by Great Britain in 1903. She was laid down under the name of Libertad, and was a sister ship of the Con-trains a day passed westward through Belgium from the Rhenish provinces. The storm broke on April 22nd at Langemarck, and it has been raging ever since. From the sea to Dixmude the Belgians hold the Yser lines with practically no change. The British position to the east of Ypres and the French lines north of the town have been drawn in, and the Germans hold perhaps a mile and a half more of Belgian territory there than they did during the winter. In northern France, between Armentieres and La Basse, the British have gained quite a bit of ground since April 22nd, in addition to that taken earlier during the battle of Neuve Chapelle. South of La Basse, towards Arras, the French have made a notable advance, including the capture of the plateau of Lorette, which had been transformed into a strong fortress during the winter by the Germans. The losses on both sides during the month's struggle have been prodigious. The small Canadian contingent alone has lost 800 men killed, wounded and missing. The German losses are estimated at considerably over 150,000, while the British and French combined must be well up to 100,000. It has been all slaughter and little progress.

Experts on several occasions have given expressions to the belief that something more than this interminable trench warfare must be contemplated by the British War Office. Returning travellers say that the United Kingdom is swarming with soldiers who are sufficiently trained for active service, but who are held at home for no apparent reason, while in Flanders British troops at the front are still facing a foe superior in numbers. The mystery may be explained some day before long by the dramatic appearance of a powerful British army in some entirely unexpected quarter—in Alsace, Schleswig Holstein, or the Adriatic coast of Austria.

There is a good deal of speculation coming in from Italy, but very little information. The Italian censor is of the Buckmaster type. From Paris come persistent rumors of a naval action in the Adriatic, in which an Italian cruiser is said to have torpedoed and sunk two Austrian cruisers. All that seems certain regarding land operations is that the Italian plan of campaign contemplates the sealing up of the passes of the Trentino while the main advance into Austrian territory proceeds around the northern coast of the Adriatic towards Trieste. Up to an early hour this morning there was no news indicating that the Italians had crossed the Isonzo. The rebanders off the shore of the Gallipoli Peninsula, H. M. S. Triumph, Capt. Maurice Fitzmaurice, was torpedoed by a submarine and sank shortly afterwards. A majority of the officers and men are reported to have been saved, including the Captain Commander.

"The submarine was chased by destroyers and patrolling craft till dark."

The British battleship Triumph was built at Barrow in 1902 for the Chilean Government, but was purchased by Great Britain in 1903. She was laid down under the name of Libertad, and was a sister ship of the Constitution, which also was purchased from Chile and rechristened Swiftsure.

Latest Summary of War Events.

The Dardanelles are rapidly engulfing Britain's surplus of pre-Dreadnoughts. The Triumph is the fourth British battleship, sunk in the Straits or off the Gallipoli Peninsula, having been preceded by the Ocean, the Irresistible and the Goliath. There was very little loss of life in connection with the sinking of the first two on March 18th, but the Goliath carried down 600 men with her. The official announcement by the Admiralty that the Triumph had been torpedoed off the Peninsula contained the additional information that the majority of the crew had been saved. The disaster is more disquieting than those which preceded it, because it shows that either a Turkish submarine from Constantinople has come through the Straits into the Aegean or that an Austrian or German submarine from the Adriatic is now lurking in the waters occupied by the battleships of the Allies engaged in the Dardanelles operations. In either case there is danger of further attack. The Triumph was a more modern though smaller battleship than most of the vessels engaged in the operations, and mounted four 10-inch guns instead of four 12's. She and her sister ship, the Swiftsure, were not built for the British navy, but for Chile, and were taken over in 1904 on completion to strengthen the battle fleet. Before the war broke out they were in eastern waters, and were despatched to the Dardanelles after Germany's strength in the Pacific had been crushed. Six British pre-Dreadnoughts and a French battleship of the same class have been sunk since the war began, and not one of them by gunfire. The mine and the submarine are the battleships' most potent foe. One of the British ships the Bulwark, was destroyed by an internal explosion, but no one will ever know what caused the explosion.

These losses, while regrettable, especially when they involve the death of the brave seamen who man the ships, do not endanger the naval supremacy of the Allies. The addition of Italy to the foes of Germany and Austria makes their already hopeless inferiority at sea still more manifest. Italy has quite a number of semi-obsolete big-gun pre-Dreadnoughts which may be used in the Dardanelles operations should there be need of more vessels to proceed to Constantinople when the Straits are forced. The repeated losses, however, vindicate Lord Fisher's view that the forcing of the Straits is a job for the army rather than for the fleet.

The struggle in Flanders and Northern France continues with relatively little change in the position of the two armies. It is now over a month since the Germans reinforced their troops in this region to the extent of almost half a million men. During mid-April as many as a hundred troop coming from Italy, but very little information. The Italian censor is the Buckmaster type. From Pa come persistent rumors of a naval action in the Adriatic, in which an Italian cruiser is said to have torped and sunk two Austrian cruisers. That seems certain regarding operations is that the Italian plan campaign contemplates the sealing of the passes of the Trentino while main advance into Austrian territory proceeds around the northern coast of the Adriatic towards Trieste. To an early hour this morning there was no news indicating that the Italians had crossed the Isonzo. The struggle to determine the fate of the Isonzo will take place along the Isonzo.

CAPTAIN JOHN'S ISLAND, NEAR DESERONTO MAY BECOME
ABODE OF CONVALESCENTS.

Captain John's Island with the buildings, located near Deseronto, in the Bay of Quinte, belonging to the Independent Order of Foresters, is likely to become a convalescent home for Canadian soldiers. If the buildings are suitable they will be offered to the Militia Department, which is now considering their utility. A commercial traveller of Trenton, in a communication to The Toronto Star made the suggestion that these buildings and the island be used for this purpose. Supreme Counsellor W. H. Hunter said the suggestion was a little late. "The idea has already been discussed by the Independent Order of Foresters," said he, "and a communication sent to the Militia Department. It is now under consideration, and all depends upon the suitability of the building. If the building is suitable the Independent Order of Foresters will offer it to the Militia Department. The island was formerly the Orphans' Home of the Independent Order of Foresters, established by the late Dr. Oronhyatekha. The main building will accommodate about 100 soldiers and is steam heated. The other buildings are summer cottages.

ANCIENT TOOTHPICKS.

They Used to Be Made of Silver and Were Worn in the Hat.

The employment of toothpicks is very ancient. In Grote's "History of Greece" we find that Agathocles, "among the worst of Greeks," was poisoned by a medicated quill handed to him for cleaning his teeth after dinner.

Toothpicks were in common use in the time of the Caesars. Martial tells us those made of a chip of mastic wood (lentiscus) are the best, but that if you run short of such timber a quill will serve your purpose, and he ridicules an old fellow who was in the habit of digging away at his gums with his polished lentiscus, though he had not a tooth left in his head.

Toothpicks occur early of silver, but pieces of wood or of feathers with a red end as quills in our day were most usual. The toothpick is the Anglo-Saxon tothgare. The old name was picktooth. It was imported by travelers from Italy and France, and the using of it was long deemed an affected mark of gentility. It was worn as a trophy in the hat, and Sir Thomas Overbury describes a courtier, the pink of fashion, "with a picktooth in his hat."

Bishop Earle says of an idle gallant, "His picktooth bears a great part in his discourse."—London Telegraph.

SHORT LIFE OF BIG GUNS.

Every Time a Rifle Is Fired Some of Its Bore Is Worn Away.

The life of the gun, so far as its absolute destruction by bursting is concerned, is practically unlimited, but not so its accuracy life. Every time a gun is fired some of the interior surface of its bore and delicate rifling are wiped away, and a certain degree of its accuracy is lost.

This is true of the shoulder rifle, with its bore so small that it would not much more than admit a lead pencil, no less than of the great sixteen inch siege gun and the other grades of artillery pieces.

Fortunately for the infantryman, the wear on the bore of the shoulder rifle is much slower, as the wearing out of the bore decreases rapidly with a decrease in the size of the bore. Erosion, as it is called by the artillerymen, is greatest in the large guns and least in the 30 rifle.

The big guns which form the main batteries of our warships and are employed in our coast fortifications can fire from 150 to 250 rounds (dependent upon the pressure and heat in the powder chamber) before they begin to lose their accuracy.—Scientific American.

FOMENTING A REVOLT.

German Agents Are Trying to Embarrass Italy.

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER.
May 25, via Paris.—The Messagero in Rome yesterday printed a story to the effect that it has been assured that German and Turkish officers already have gone to Tripoli and Cyrenaica, taking with them money and gifts for the chiefs of the tribes in the interior of those countries.

It is hoped by these officers, the newspapers adds, to bring about a great insurrection against Italian rule, forcing the Italian troops and the loyal population to retire to the coast, where they will be under the protection of Italian warships. It is also asserted by The Messagero that the Austrian navy has arranged to send submarines to make torpedo attacks against the Italian coast defences.

"The prudence and energy of the Libyan Government," The Messagero adds, "will be able to meet the unfortunate situation which the Turkish and German emissaries daily are trying to make worse."

London Man Drowned.

LONDON, Ont., May 25.—The first local drowning accident of the season occurred yesterday at noon when John W. Tuppholme, 22, and married, fell overboard from a motor launch in the River Thames, near Woodland cemetery, and was drowned before help could reach him. The body was not recovered until late last night. An inquest has been ordered.

Trawler Sunk; Thirteen Drown.

LONDON, May 25.—The French steam trawler St. Just of Arcachon was torpedoed and literally smashed to pieces near Dartmouth Thursday afternoon, thirteen of her crew being drowned. The captain was the only survivor.

King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by Gen. Brusati, left for front at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The King dropped all affairs of state, leaving the responsibility for the civil administration in hands of the Ministry. The King's departure followed that of all princes of the royal house, who have been directed to assume command in the first line.

Italy's first day in the war with ed only minor encounters, but on the offensive and defensive Italian colors came off victoriously.

Two British warships co-operate with the Italian fleet in a naval battle in the Adriatic according to official report. The remainder of Austrian fleet fled northward, Anglo-Italian fleet pursuing the enemy warships until they got under the guns of Pola.

The position Italy finds herself in is extremely curious. Since May 4 negotiations with Austria have been broken off. Parliament pronounced in favor of war; has conferred full plenary powers on Government to make war, and provided for the prosecution of war.

Rome is delirious with joy. Several hundred thousand people headed by the mayor, gathered the Quirinal Friday night. Members of the royal family appeared on the balcony they were enthusiastically received. King Victor was greeted with cries of "Long live the King."

All navigation services on Adriatic have been suspended. Italian warships patrolling the banian coast have put into Cattaro an Austrian port in the southern extremity of Dalmatia, and close the Montenegrin frontier.

Italy took on Thursday the definite step toward her entry in the war when, by a vote of 407 to 1 of the deputies present at the opening of Parliament, full powers were granted to the Government to deal with all public matters at the declaration of war against Austria, and authorizing the necessary extraordinary expenditure. The decision as to the form which the break with Austria will take and exact date was left with the Cabinet.

The movement of Italian troops toward the northern and eastern frontiers proceeds apace. Gen. d'Annunzio, the chief of staff, is at once to take full command of 1,700,000 soldiers now in the northern zone.

Italian refugees from Pola report that the Austrian police broke their houses and seized their furniture. Practically the entire population of the port, the refugees said, has been pressed into military service, and the women and children of Italian nationality fear they will be placed in detention camps or prison.

TURKISH LOSSES 80,000.

They Are Still Bringing Up Forces,

However, to Save Dardanelles.

IN THE EASTERN MEDITER- RANEAN, May 25.—The Turks have brought up large reinforcements and large numbers of guns of all types against the positions held by the allied troops on the Peninsula of Gallipoli, in a supreme effort to wrest from them the ground so dearly won and gallantly defended.

It is estimated that the Turkish losses in the Dardanelles amount to 80,000. A large number of wound- ed are now being sent to Smyrna and Anatolia.

The struggle now going on in the southern portion of the Peninsula baffles description. There are times when simultaneous attacks are de- livered from all directions. The whole of the Peninsula which is open to view from the opposite island looks like an inferno of shrieking shells.

General Sir Ian Hamilton, Com- mander-in-Chief of the British land forces at the Dardanelles, in a cable- gram Friday to the Governor ex- pressing regret for the death of Brigadier-General W. T. Bridges, a commander of the Australian forces at the Dardanelles, who died as the result of a wound, says:

"The irreparable loss was bril- liantly avenged yesterday by his own troops, who inflicted a loss of seven thousand on the enemy, our loss being under five hundred."

"There was a lively bombardment Thursday of the Dardanelles, direct- ed principally against numerous Turkish camps at Komu Burnu, on the Asiatic side," says Reuter's Athens correspondent. "It is stated that Chanak Kalesi has been com- pletely destroyed, and that the town of Gallipoli, on the European side of the waterway, has been badly dam- aged."

"Several of the European forts are still holding out, however," adds the despatch.

GAS AGAIN BREAKS LINE.

British Forced Temporarily to Relin- quish Trenches Near Ypres.

LONDON, May 25.—Field-Marshal Sir John French sends the following report from the western war zone, under date of May 24:—

"In the fighting on May 16 and 17, to the northeast of Festubert, seven machine guns were captured and it is possible that more may be buried in the destroyed trenches. To-day three German batteries were silenced by our guns, one battery being destroyed by direct hits and its ammunition blown up.

"East of Ypres the Germans de- veloped an infantry attack this morning under cover of a poisonous gas, hostile artillery at the same time fir- ing asphyxiating gas shells. Our troops were forced to evacuate some of their trenches, and the enemy penetrated our line in two or three places. Fighting is still in progress and portions of our original line have already been retaken."

Weather conditions having improv- ed both the British and French troops have resumed the offensive north of Arras. General Joffre's forces made a brilliantly successful assault on the Lorette slopes, capturing the German fortified position known as "the White Way." These works are situated on the only remaining ridge of the hill which was still partially in the possession of the enemy. As a result of the French success their further advance toward Lens cannot now be hampered, the entire Lorette

GALICIAN DRIVE ENDS

Austro-German Army on the San Battling for Its Life.

Against Advice of His Generals Kais- er Has Ruined Chance of Victory and Is Fleeing From Jaroslau— Russians Are Now on Offensive and Capturing Thousands of Pris- oners Daily—Enemy's Loss Huge.

LONDON, May 25.—Far from its base, evidently short of ammunition, and cheated of its prey by the Rus- sian commander, the Austro-German army on the San is now battling to extricate itself from its perilous position in central Galicia, according to latest reports that reached here last night and early this morning.

The Petrograd correspondent of The London Daily News cables: The Kaiser on Saturday night left Jaroslau, Galicia, and journeyed westward in the deepest dejection. The blinds were drawn before the train started.

Hindenburg had warned him that the plan of a terrific blow on a short front looked well on paper, but the Russians were likely to frustrate it and entangle the German troops for several weeks. Hindenburg proved right, and Mackensen and Emmich have abandoned as hopeless the task of extricating the Germans from a 200-mile front.

They have nobody to spare to re- sist the Russian advance from the Pilitza, where thousands of prisoners are being taken daily. All reserves from inside Germany are now mov- ing through Czenstochova into Pol- land. None are going into Galicia, where the Russian army has secured the ascendancy and is mercilessly slaughtering the Germans, whose ar- tillery is silent and without shells.

The Daily Chronicle Petrograd cor- respondent cables: The German phalanx that was to have been driven like a battering ram through the whole of Galicia to Lemberg has come to a stop on the River San. Its head is on the right bank of the river and its base on the left, but the Rus- sians have retaken the village at the apex of the phalanx, and, while the Germans still hold the centre on the San, the Russians to the northward and southward are on the left bank of the river and threatening the Ger- man communications.

In the Shavli region a Russian of- ficial account, which is only up to the 18th, reports the capture of hun- dreds of prisoners and some machine guns.

Frederick Rennet, cabled from Petrograd on Saturday: It is calculat- ed Germans have lost 150,000 men since their advance began from the Dunajec. General Radko Dmietrieff's army during its successful retreat northeast from Gorlice to the San ac- counted for 70,000.

The entire Russian army in Gal- icia is now in a position to manoeuvre as it pleases. The extreme right from Opatow has moved westward into south Poland and now threat- ens to envelop the Germans.

SOLDIER WARMERS.

Russians Carry Little Radiators In Their Pockets.

A peculiar device which Russian soldiers use to alleviate the cold while in the field is thus described by a Russian officer:

Russian soldiers never suffer from frost, and if there were cases in former campaigns when the soldiers have died from it, that was only due to vodka. But now, when vodka and other alcoholic drinks no longer exist in the Russian army, there is no further danger for the Russian soldier.

The Japanese have taught the Rus- sians to fight the frost. It is very well known that only the inhabitants of the north of Japan are accustomed to the coldest winter, and for the Japa- nese army the prospect of a winter struggle with their enemy in Man- churia or Siberia was a problem of the greatest gravity. They succeeded in combating King Frost.

The Russians first learned from their enemy how to keep warm after some winter battles when they took prisoners, and Gen. Kuropatkin, as ed both the British and French troops have resumed the offensive north of Arras. General Joffre's forces made a brilliantly successful assault on the Lorette slopes, capturing the German fortified position known as "the White Way." These works are situated on the only remaining ridge of the hill which was still partially in the possession of the enemy. As a result of the French success their further advance toward Lens cannot now be hampered, the entire Lorette hill and the lesser ridges which the Germans had defended fiercely for more than six months being now held by the French. The enemy was also driven from the section of Albain St. Nazaire which linked the "White Way" works to the northern end of the village still occupied by them. Several hundred prisoners were taken, including numerous of- ficers.

MORE MEN NEEDED.

Call Has Gone Out For Ten Thou- and Canadians For Service.

OTTAWA, May 25.—The call has gone forth for ten thousand more troops from Canada for service over- seas. At a full meeting of the Militia Council it has been decided to at once proceed to the raising of seven new battalions of infantry and several brigades of ar- tillery. These will be in addition to the third division, from which rein- forcements have already been drawn by companies from the various bat- talions, which battalions are again busy recruiting up to strength. The new battalions will be raised as follows:

One battalion from Toronto, one from Kingston, one from Montreal, one from Winnipeg, one from Mani- toba and Saskatchewan, one from Alberta, and one from British Col- umbia. It is probable that in each city the various militia regiments will supply a company each to the battalion organized there—as, for instance, in Montreal, where one company will be raised by the Victo- ria Rifles, one by the 65th, one by the Irish Rangers and one by the Grenadier Guards. The disposition of the new artillery brigade has not yet been definitely decided upon.

PRINCESS SEEKS SEPARATION.

German Crown Prince's Consort Re- turning to Russia, Says Report.

PARIS, May 25.—The Journal des Debats says:

"We learn from an absolutely re- liable source that Kron Prinzessen Cecilie has decided to separate from her husband. She is about to leave Berlin for Russia.

"She has been urged to take this step by her mother, the Grand Duch- ess Anastasia."

The Grand Duchess Anastasia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who is of Russian birth, renounced her Ger- man nationality at the beginning of the war. She had been banned from the German Court by the Kaiser for a number of years because of her unconventional ideas. She was one of the Paris tango champions last season.

The Kron Prinzessen gave birth to a daughter recently, all the news- papers announcing that the Kron Prinz went to Berlin for the event.

News of the Kron Prinzessen's de- termination to quit the Kron Prinz causes no surprise in Paris. It is alleged to have been brought about by the Kron Prinz's infidelities in Luxemburg.

CHURCHILL TO STAY.

Asquith Has Determined to Keep Him—Haldane to Go.

LONDON, May 25.—Premier As- quith has decided that Winston Spencer Churchill shall remain in the Cabinet in some other position than that of First Lord of the Admiralty. It is understood that the Premier tried hard to retain Viscount Hal- dane as Lord High Chancellor, but the Unionists were so strongly op- posed to this that Haldane will be sacri- ficed.

There is renewed talk of David Lloyd George combining the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mun- icipalities Minister, but this point still remains unsettled.

John Redmond, the Irish leader, has steadily refused to accept a seat in the Cabinet. There will be a meeting of the Nationalist party in Dublin to-day, at which this matter doubtless will be discussed.

Lord Fisher's resignation as First Sea Lord seems to be a definite one, he having declined to work with Ar- thur J. Balfour at the Admiralty.

LONDON, May 25.—No candidates for admission to the clergy of the Church of England in the Diocese of London who are of military age and physically fit for duty will be ordain- ed during the war. The ordination council of the diocese adopted the following resolution Friday: "That no application on behalf of any can- didate be considered unless the can- didate proves to the satisfaction of the council that he is unable to serve for the war."

known that only the inhabitants of the north of Japan are accustomed to the coldest winter, and for the Japa- nese army the prospect of a winter struggle with their enemy in Man- churia or Siberia was a problem of the greatest gravity. They succeeded in combating King Frost.

The Russians first learned from their enemy how to keep warm after some winter battles when they took prisoners, and Gen. Kuropatkin, as well as all Russian generals, approv- ed the cleverness of the Japanese.

It is most important for a soldier to keep his hands warm, the feet, when well covered, do not suffer so much as the hands, which are always in action, and in most cases without gloves, especially when shooting or cleaning arms. When you have your hands warm the circulation of the blood generally becomes better, and you do not suffer from cold.

I remember that during the Russo- Japanese war our soldiers brought to us officers some strange objects taken from dead or wounded Japanese. These objects were like metallic ciga- rette boxes covered with cheap velvet or some kind of stuff, and were quite warm as if they had been filled with hot water. With great curiosity we studied those boxes, and when we opened the hermetically sealed top we found that the box was filled with a special sort of black, slowly burning powder, which kept the box at a con- siderable temperature.

Afterward, when I became a pris- oner of war and spent many months in Japan, I fully learned this method, and during all my winter's imprison- ment used these splendid cheap and comfortable pocket warmers without further suffering from cold. King Frost was beaten.

I can truly say that never in my life have I seen anything more practical, more convenient or more useful for a soldier than these warm- ers.

I know how precious is a fire that can warm you a little when you are frozen deep to the bones. After a long period on outpost duty without a fire you become apathetic, indif- ferent and yearn only for death, the great deliverer from your physical sufferings.

And when suddenly you feel your- self warm! What happens then?

All is forgotten. A new force rises in you, new courage, new energy! A cup of tea can make a new man of you—a soldier capable of the greatest deeds of bravery. That is so, because man is a human being, not a ma- chine.

The Japanese soldiers each had several of these small pocket warm- ers and a reserve of the special pow- der in packets. They lighted them when the frost was too strong, and kept them in their pockets, so that they never knew what it was to be frozen.

From the monetary point of view, it is the cheapest remedy against frost. The powder is some kind of mixture of semi-burnt rice straw with an addition of black gunpowder and something else that I do not know, which regulates the process of burning for many hours. I used these boxes in Japan like hot water bottles at night, and when I awoke they were still very warm.

THREE IN A ROW THREE OUT, ALL OUT

Ottawa, May 27th.—It never rains but it pours. Accidents never come singly. Tack, tack too—three in a row. Three out, all out. These and otherwise saws are passing from mouth to mouth as the result of the Roblin Government's downfall.

The three accidents the soothsayers have in mind have all happened to the Conservative party within a year and are pretty well distributed as danger signs. First, Premier Fleming of New Brunswick was investigated and unseated; next Sir Richard McBride was sandbagged by his chief friend and adviser Attorney-General Fowser; now Sir Rodmond Roblin yields to fate and a graft enquiry that must be dodged if it can't be headed off.

The blight, as far as its course can be traced by public events, seems to effect equally the Maritime Provinces, the middle West and British Columbia. It extends from ocean to ocean, seizing on those spots which will give it room to spread to the most advantage. It is being recalled by persons skilled in reading the writing on the wall that the Conservative popular majority in 1911 was something less than thirty-two thousand and that very little more of this sort of thing will belshazzar—the word is used as a verb—the Borden Government for good.

As matters stand the Liberals control five provincial governments out of nine and are reaching for Number Six. The Yukon Territorial Council is Conservative at present but as the Yukon never aims to be out in the cold any more than its position in the Arctic Circle warrants there is little doubt it would be Liberal if public opinion in the larger part of Canada slanted that way. No one blames the Yukon for wanting to be on the sunny side of politics if only to offset the hard winters. At all events things are getting no better fast and that is one reason why the Borden Government looks forward to an election in September, unless otherwise detained.

The catastrophe in New Brunswick has seen print and need not be explained again now, but Sir Richard McBride's misfortunes in British Columbia are still wrapped in a certain amount of mystery. It seems that Sir Richard was challenged to a test of strength by his grand vizier Bowser. When the caucus showed twenty-one to twenty-one in the matter of an election which the young Premier had set his heart on, Sir Richard realized that his kingdom had been divided, called for his horse, metaphorically speaking, and rode away to London to see his friend and exemplar Winston Churchill, who once advertised him as having "the seal of high destiny on his brow." Rumor has it that Bowser removed the seal and that Sir Richard would be quite satisfied now to become Agent-General for British Columbia in London with a fair salary and opportunities to indulge his taste for the best English society.

In spite of reports to the contrary Sir Richard is not a rich man. All he got out of politics was a good living. He is the Immortal Boy, takes no thought of the morrow, spends his own money that way, and adopts the same policy toward crown lands and railway subsidies. It's the Irish generosity in him that makes

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

and his statesmanship Sir Richard couldn't come up to the specifications. However he once spent twenty-five thousand dollars welcoming Sir Wilfrid to British Columbia's midst, said sum being half admiration and half politics. Sir Richard was looking toward Ottawa at that time, certain advanced thinkers in the Conservative party, including Rufus Pope, subsequently Senator, having groomed him to replace Robert Borden who wasn't such a success then as he became afterwards. The twenty-five thousand dollar reception was Sir Richard making a splash for the Ottawa considerations. But that was as far as it got. Sir Richard wisely stuck to his own little flower pot, did not invite comparisons by entering the larger field and remained true to British Columbia as long as British Columbia could afford it. The "seal of high destiny" may result in his becoming a Unionist candidate for an English constituency—picture the Three Musketeers, Winston and Dick and Golloper Smith—but it will hardly lead him back to the premiership of British Columbia again.

Sir Rodman Roblin lived by the sword, so to speak, and he perished by it. Autocrat though he was of fifteen years standing he could not stand before the march of the Cameron man, meaning Sir Douglas, the

In spite of reports to the contrary Sir Richard is not a rich man. All he got out of politics was a good living. He is the Immortal Boy, takes no thought of the morrow, spends his own money that way, and adopts the same policy toward crown lands and railway subsidies. It's the Irish generosity in him that makes him as free with your money as he is with his own—that and a faith in human nature which leads him to accept the word of land-grabbers and subsidy hogs as being good as their bonds, which isn't putting to high a value on it at that. At any rate the rare old, fat, old golden days of dream surpluses with a backing of promissory notes are pretty well over in British Columbia and Sir Richard is looking around for another job. Sir Richard is no hand at financing a deficit. Powder makes a better fist of it. Being originally a Bluenose he can face a blue outlook better than Sir Richard, who is a typical son of the Pacific Slope. Still he was the bright little morning glory while he lasted.

Externally Sir Richard modelled himself on Sir Wilfrid Laurier, copying his hair and his clothes and other outward and visible signs but when it came to copying his mind

Sir Rodman Roblin lived by the sword, so to speak, and he perished by it. Autocrat though he was of fifteen years standing he could not stand before the march of the Cameron man, meaning Sir Douglas, the Lieutenant Governor. The immovable obstacle had to give way before the irresistible impulse. In short Sir Rodmond met his match. Outside of the million dollar mystery altogether, Sir Rodmond brought his fate on his own head by his own mental and temperamental habits. A tyrant can do much with a free country as long as he uses finesse but course work like the last Manitoba election is almost sure to get him in wrong with the democracy. Besides Sir Rodmond was left appreciably weaker when Bob Rogers went to Ottawa. Ever since then Sir Rodmond has allowed his right hand to know what his left was doing—indeed he could hardly prevent it—with Bob away—and the consequence has been a terrible mess. At the time Bob went to Ottawa there were rumors that Sir Rodmond was jealous but events seem to have justified Premier Borden's choice. At any rate Bob Rogers is on the job yet while

Sir Rodmond has lost his. Sir Rodmond as the "fixer" at Ottawa, doing Bob's work, wearing Bob's smile—what do you know about that? And yet Sir Rodmond thought he had it in him.

There is reason to believe that the Hon. Doctor Montague was only a pale, cereal substitute for Bob Rogers in the Roblin cabinet. The Dr. drew a good long bow, in 1887 when his election in Monk was twice voided, and he did fairly well in the Bowell and Tupper cabinets as long as they lasted but he seems to have lost much of his cunning between 1896 when he disappeared from Dominion politics and 1913 when he bobbed up again in Manitoba. Politics is very much like billiards—you lose your touch if you stop playing for seventeen years.

The truth is that Dr. Montague is and has always been a first-class hoodoo. Sir Rodmond Roblin should have dodged him on his record. To take him into a cabinet any time during the year 1913, or any year with a 13 in it, was simply tweaking Fate by the nose. Dr. Montague has a special affinity for moribund governments. The Conservative Government at Ottawa lasted just six months after joined it; the Conservative Government at Winnipeg lasted eight months under similar circumstances. Will it be necessary for the Doctor to board the ship for the third time to prove that rocking the boat is the best thing he does? I trow no Caesar asked for fat men who sleep o' nights to act as cabinet ministers but there is no sleep where Dr. Montague is. He is fat but his burden is disaster.

ONE DANGER OF AMMONIA.

This Substance May Bring About the End of the World.

The continuous decay of vegetation generates ammonia. As many scientists have said, there is more ammonia in the atmosphere now than there was 10,000 years ago, and considerable more than there was one million years ago. Fresh supplies are added year after year, so that in a future day there will be an exceedingly great quantity of it.

Now, ammonia has a combustive property. If the atmosphere should get laden with it a universal conflagration would be inevitable. The outbreak of a volcano or a flash of lightning would be sufficient to cause the circumambient air to ignite—all space would become a mass of raging flame which would boil the rivers and seas, converting them into hot vapors, which would devour all living creatures, all forms of vegetable life, would bake the earth and perhaps burn it to cinders.

The earth could be converted into smoke within a second. It could be hurled out of its course and made to come into dreadful collision with another planet, or, thrown dangerously near the sun, it would be drawn by the wonderful solar attraction into the fiery bosom of that bright monarch of the universe.

The horror of such a catastrophe appears unspeakably great — something from which the startled imagination recoils and staggers. And yet, after due reflection, we must admit that the prospect is sublime rather than horrible. Anticipation of an intolerable pain is worse than the pain itself. A human being is capable of pain up to a certain degree only, as also of pleasure up to a correspondingly high degree, and no more. Nay, one person is capable of more suffering and more enjoyment than another, and it is altogether a fallacious notion that there is as much agony when a fly is crushed "as when a giant dies."

How often, after long and dismal anticipation of a tragic event, we have found at the last that the anticipation of a tragic event outran the reality. This is caused not only by the quickness and resourcefulness of mind, but also by the circumstance that we cannot bear more than a certain measure of pain and affliction.

Then, too, it must be remembered that as every extreme causes its opposite, as a white heat gives a sensation of cold, as frost can burn like fire, as laughter can end in tears and tears in laughter, as wisdom sometimes subsides into folly, and the jester will utter the sayings of a sage, so excess of pain may end in a sort of thrilling pleasure, and this may account for the sudden ecstasies of martyrs under torture.

The passing of earth, then, would not cause so much human pain as is generally believed. It would probably be nothing more than the sudden awakening into a new world from an outgrown condition of being.

UNCLE SAM'S NAVAL EXPERT.

One Who Does Nothing but Play With Toy Battleships.

In a long, low building down near the river in Washington there is a man who plays with toy ships on a toy ocean. And as a result of his play he can foretell exactly how the big battleships of the United States navy will behave in a storm at sea, and he can predict to a nicety how much horsepower will be needed to drive the great transatlantic liners laden with their passengers and freight. He does this before even the keels of the ships have been laid down.

He is a naval constructor in the United States navy, and the toy ocean on which he works is the United States experimental model basin. The sheet of water in the basin is 500 feet long and fifty feet wide, with a maximum depth of fourteen feet.

But in this limited space the naval expert, working with a wave maker, a dynamometer, a towing bridge and other apparatus, can solve all the mechanical problems connected with the construction of a ship. Its probable roll when struck by giant waves and the horsepower needed in its tremendous engines to drive it through the water. He works with wooden models twenty feet long. Some of them weigh 1,000 pounds, none of them more than 2,000. The other countries of the world use paraffine models, but he works entirely with the miniature ships of wood.

The drawings and plans of the battleships to be built by Uncle Sam are turned over to the constructor by the navy department's bureau of construction and repair. In a little shop adjoining the building which covers the model basin the models are made and painted. Bags of shot, each weighing twenty-five pounds, are kept on hand to bring the model up to the corresponding weight of the big ship. The final tests are made in the "toy ocean" near by.—Popular Magazine.

THE DEATH'S HEAD HUSSARS.

Organized Originally by Frederick William of Brunswick, Napoleon's Deadly Foe, the Famous Body of Cavalry Fought Its Way to Renown.

The curt refusal of Napoleon I. to allow Frederick William, duke of Brunswick, to bury the body of his exiled father in his native land inspired the organization of the Death's Head hussars, the most famous regiment in the present German army.

Deeply moved by the ungracious act of the despotic Napoleon, Frederick William, after his first paroxysm of indignation and rage had subsided, vowed eternal vengeance against the French conqueror, and until the day of his death, which was June 16, 1815, on the field of Quatre Bras, he was Napoleon's most implacable foe in all the German states.

Brunswick being barred to him by the victories of the relentless French invader, Duke Frederick William repaired to Bohemia after his father's death. He was without funds, but through the efforts of his sister, then princess of Wales, English funds found their way to him, and he was enabled to set on foot the plans he had formed to revenge himself upon his enemy.

All Germany was then under Napoleon's foot. His armies had swept away all opposition. Prussia, Brunswick, Bavaria, Saxony, all the states were mere vassals of France. But though conquered or subjugated their hatred of the oppressor was intense, and underneath the surface a fire of hatred smoldered, which the duke helped to fan into the blaze that eventually sent Bonaparte to St. Helena.

The duke announced himself as Napoleon's foe. Men flocked to his standard. He organized and equipped 2,000 cavalymen and, in memory of his father, clothed them in black. A silver skull and crossbones adorned their hussar headdress, and the silver lace slashings of the jackets were placed to resemble the ribs of a skeleton.

"The Black Brunswickers" they were called. With the gallant duke at their head they began a guerrilla warfare that was a continual worry to the French armies. Von Stein, Scharnhorst and others gave them secret encouragement.

Through Saxony, Hesse and Hanover the troopers gobbled up and put to the sword French detachments. Recruits flocked to them. At Berneck the duke gave battle to the French General Junot and whipped him. All Germany thrilled at the romantic accounts of the daring of the terrible "Black Hussars."

A Saxon army was whipped at Zittau and another force at Halberstadt. A regiment had grown into an army, the only one Napoleon's troops could not corner and whip. The duchy of Brunswick was invaded and the French garrison alarmed. Leipzig was surprised and captured.

Until the battle of Wagram the duke and his hussars rode over Germany at will. That victory gave Napoleon more time to devote to them, and the duke

The Color of Lakes.

Some lakes are distinctly blue, others are of various shades of green, so that in some cases they are scarcely distinguishable from their level, grass surrounded banks. A few, too, are almost black. The lake of Geneva is azure hued, the lake of Constance and the lake of Lucerne are green, while the color of the Mediterranean has been called indigo. The lake of Brienz is greenish yellow, and its neighbor, Lake Thun, is blue.

UNSEEN COMPANIONS.

Familiars That Are Born and Dwell In Our Imaginations.

Real men and women are not the only people. Our minds are inhabited as truly as any other country. Every child has his invisible playmate, to whom he talks more freely than to his parents and with whom he goes upon strange adventures—a tiny Columbus, with whom he embarks upon the waters of the bathtub to discover a new land, or a roving De Soto, with whom he slips through the garden gate unattended and unafraid, always before he is three years old, bent upon an excursion into the wilderness which lies across the brook in the field or in the woods.

If you are the father or mother of this child you never can understand that—how the timid baby who was never before out of your sight could have gone so far alone. Why, when you found him, stained with his travels, very tired, almost nodding, he was still confident, preoccupied and bent upon a further pilgrimage into the unknown. It is because he was not alone. He was accompanied by an other whom he knows better than he will ever know father or mother, one of those companions of his own fancy, about whom he never tells you of any one else.

These people grow up like other people. The little child has his familiar, and the young man his his "ideal," always a woman—not the one he marries nor even the one he might have married, but one whom he never saw in the flesh, a veiled and inscrutable presence who never forsakes him. And when he grows old and the wife he did marry grows old she remains young, fairer than the lilacs, sweeter than honey dew upon the leaves in June.—Corra Harris in Harper's Magazine.

A Famous Warhorse.

The following inscription marks the grave at Strathfieldsaye of Wellington's famous charger, Copenhagen, which died in 1835 at the ripe old age of twenty-seven. This charger was buried with military honors:

God's humble instrument, though meaner clay,
Should share the glories of that glorious day.

Copenhagen, it might be mentioned, was the grandson of the mighty Eclipse, and Wellington paid £400 for him. His powers of endurance were marvelous "I rode him," said Wellington, "at the battle of Waterloo from 4 in the morning until midnight. If he fed it was in the standing corn and as I sat in the saddle."—London Globe.

A Specious Plea.

"Your honor, if we can show that serious errors were made in the choosing of the jury would you grant us a new trial?"

"That depends. What serious errors were made?"

"There were twelve of them. We thought we were selecting men who would acquit our client."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

thrilled at the romantic accounts of the daring of the terrible "Black Hussars."

A Saxon army was whipped at Zittau and another force at Halberstadt. A regiment had grown into an army, the only one Napoleon's troops could not corner and whip. The duchy of Brunswick was invaded and the French garrison alarmed. Leipzig was surprised and captured.

Until the battle of Wagram the duke and his hussars rode over Germany at will. That victory gave Napoleon more time to devote to them, and the duke was forced to flee to England. But the "Black Hussars," with the death's head on their caps, continued the warfare in scattered bands. They were welded into a brigade in 1814 and, as a part of a division in the allied army commanded by the Duke of Brunswick, rode into Paris after Napoleon's downfall.

They fought again during the hundred days. The Duke of Brunswick did not live to see Napoleon's complete humiliation. He died on the field of battle while trying to rally some recruits who started a stampede at the first French fire.

The fame of the hussars had reached such a point that the organization was continued in the Prussian army. Today its colonel is the crown prince of Germany, and among its officers are princes of a dozen reigning German families.

The regiment presents a splendid appearance on parade, its picturesque uniform, of which the skull and crossbones on the beaddress are the most striking attractions, imparting to the dashing cavalymen a sinister and startling effect.—Kansas City Times.

The Walrus' Defenses.

A full grown walrus will weigh as much as 2,000 pounds, a mountainous mass of muscle and blubber. He is armed with tusks of ivory sometimes two feet in length, and when from his prepared bulk these formidable weapons are plunged downward upon an enemy they are as resistless as the drop of a guillotine. Such a thick layer of blubber lies under the skin that he is practically clad in an armor impervious to teeth and claws alike.—St. Nicholas.

Flight of a Bullet.

The same projectile propelled by the same power will travel farther if projected vertically than if projected on a horizontal line four feet from the ground. Thus a bullet fired vertically with a velocity of, say, 100 feet per second, will ascend to a height of 155.3 feet, while if fired with same speed horizontally four feet from the ground will strike the earth at a distance of fifty feet.—New York American.

the neutral traders, and it is a struggle which must be carried on by the utmost diplomacy, for Great Britain does not wish, even if it could afford, to antagonize the peace of the neutral countries by interfering with their business more than absolutely necessary.

With her own people she can in one of two ways when she cat them. If the offence is not a serious one they may be dealt with by the new trading with the enemy, which provides for a fine of $5 or five years' imprisonment or both but if a British subject is caught supplying arms or military stores the enemy he may be tried for treason, for which the punishment is death.

An interesting situation is that regard to copper. Copper may be described as the life-blood of Germany and without it Germany cannot continue to fight long. It is used in cartridge cases, for shells, and all sorts of machinery in connection with the guns on which Germany lies so much.

Copper, of course, is on the list contraband, and under international law Great Britain has a perfect right to seize every cargo of copper which she can prove is destined for Germany. At the beginning of the war she did so, and, as a matter of fact, she is still doing so, but she has run up against a very difficult situation. The copper supply of the world is controlled largely by the Guggenheim interests. Britain, as well as Germany, must buy her copper from them, and the Guggenheims dislike the idea of their cargoes which they have sold to the Germans being seized by their other customer. Of course, Great Britain has scrupulously paid for all the copper that has been seized, but the result of the seizures has been to reduce her orders for the metal. If she goes on seizing the copper magnates threaten to cut off her own supply. One way out of the difficulty, of course, would be for Great Britain to take the entire available supply of copper, and she could well afford to do so.

There has been great difficulty adjusting matters with Holland, the Scandinavian countries, especially Sweden, on which Germany relied as sources of supply for many things, and as gates through which she may receive goods from overseas. Great Britain does not desire to quarrel with or to injure the trade more than absolutely necessary for many reasons. One is, in normal times they are excellent customers of Britain and excellent friends as well.

The following figures will show in a few articles of every use Germany has been drawing supplies from Great Britain through these neutral countries. The months of September and October, 1913, Britain exported to Holland, 733,800 pounds of tea, and the same period Holland exported Germany 1,028,356 pounds. In corresponding two months of last year Britain exported to Holland 1,440,000 pounds of tea, and Holland sent 16,328,464 pounds to Germany. These figures are still more remarkable when we remember Germany is not a tea-drinking country. In ordinary years she consumes about 9,000,000 pounds. The conclusion we can draw, therefore, is that having seen how well British troops fight on tea she has begun to serve it to her own soldiers. Similar figures show how she has been drawing cocoa and coffee from Great Britain. In the same months of 1913 Great Britain exported to all European countries

A CANADIAN "SONG OF HATE."

By William Henry Taylor, author of "Canadian Seasons."

The Beaver is an animal pre-eminent for brains ;
For industry and patient pluck, above the rest he reigns.
He is the emblem of our land—the last, the best, the free—
Our God's Own Garden of the West, the School of Liberty ;
The Beaver has the artist power, to change, and take a part
In world-wide war, and show the foe he has a lion's heart.
The superhuman Prussian sneered, when he the Beavers met,
But less he'll sneer, when more he meets, to his black soul's regret.

When the Beavers build a dam they gnaw the trees until they fall,
Then float them down the stream and build a scientific wall ;
So, Beaver Boys at Laugemark built a dam which "saved the day."
They hewed and stayed the foe so well, that heaps on heaps they lay.
Yes, and they gave their thousands, too, to guard that river's shore—
The story of that human dam will live for evermore ;
Not Albuera's famous fight, nor Balacava's charge,
Nor e'en Thermopylae itself, will read more bold and large.

The polecat is a hated beast, his German name is "skunk,"
Among all other animals his breed has always stunk ;
This hellcat dines on rotten eggs, a chicken thief is he ;
He robbed the Belgian coasts to show he came from Germany.
This cultured German polecat knows the art of showing hate,
By calling Beaver odious names, most inappropriate ;
He calls the Beaver Brand of men the vile Canadian "rats."
But what's a name ? He tasted steel when met by Princess Pats.

Not satisfied with submarine, balloon, and bomb, and shell,
These Huns now use a deadly gas, imported straight from hell ;
The Devil feared his eldest son, the Kaiser, could not win
By baby-killing tactics, so he taught him how to sin
Against the morals of the worst, the vilest of the vile
Assassins of the human race, whose names our tongues defile ;
When Germans failed in open field, on sea, or in the trench,
They gave a teufelst of gas—their polecat's body stench.

Huns crucify in flesh again, the Man of Calvary.
They nail our wounded to His Cross, with fiendish cruelty ;
By God's right hand ! Sir Kaiser ! you shall taste a cup of woe ;
Canadian blood is boiling o'er, and you its wrath shall know :
Your "Songs of Hate," as well as deeds, your worthless Iron Cross,
Make you of Butcher Pharaoses, the Hohenzollern Boss ;
Forever off the Irish coast will sirens moan with hate,
And from gelpulchre caves bewail the Lusitania's fate.

522,732 pounds of cocoa, and in the two months of this year she exported 9,526,115 pounds. The figures for coffee for the same period were 20,- 966 cwt., and 83,087 cwt.

The situation has already been dealt with by the Board of Trade, which has put an embargo on the export of tea and coffee from Great Britain to the countries bordering on Germany. They have been informed as politely as possible that they have had all of these beverages that they can consume for a long time to come,
and that Great Britain has no more to spare for them.

Germany has so far been willing to pay a price enough above the market to make it worth while to secure the stuff through the countries on her borders.

Grain and meat are two necessities which Germany is much in need of and which she has been unable to obtain in any quantity, owing partly to the arrangements made by the Board of Trade and partly to the patriotism of the dealers engaged in the trade. The international grain trade is almost entirely controlled by a few large houses with headquarters in London. Some of them are British and some are French, and both have rigorously shut down on the supply of grain to Germany or to countries which might pass it on to Germany. At their suggestion the Board of Trade arrived at an ingenious bargain with the neutrals which prevents them from suffering any hardship, preserves their trade, and overcomes all difficulties of finance at the same time.

GERMANS COME TO SUDDEN STOP IN WEST GALICIA

Petrograd, May 24th—The German phalanx that was to have driven like a battering ram through the whole of Galicia to Lvoff, has come to a stop on the River San. Its head is on the right bank of that river and its base on the left, but the Russians have retaken a village at the apex of the phalanx, and while the Germans still hold the centre of the San, the Russians to the northward and southward are on the left bank of the river and are threatening the German communications. The danger to the Germans is greatest from the north,
where they are advancing in the angle between the San and the Vistula.

The Russians have taken several villages west of Nisko. Gen. Mackensen, to save his centre, has had to weaken it by detaching reinforcements for southern Poland. The Germans have been unable to keep up that ring of fire that was to have swept the Russians out of Galicia. They have also begun to economize their shells. Their

GREAT ARMIES ARE FACING ON ITALIAN BORDER

LUGANO, Switzerland, May 24.— Austro-German troops continue to pour towards the frontier from Innsbruck and Meran. The Swiss railroads are greatly overcrowded with Italian refugees, and reports reach here that the Italians resident in Austria and Germany are being badly treated.

Prince Von Buelow, the German ambassador, who is expected to come here from Rome, has not been heard from, and the German consul here has no knowledge when he will arrive.

A German despatch says Austrian and Italian troops are facing each other on the frontier, in some places only half a mile apart. The forces
there are estimated at a million men on each side.

"The Austro-German headquarters staff has arrived at Trent, and the Austrians have mounted artillery in the Stelvio Pass, which is still covered with snow. A continuous stream of troops from the Tyrol is arriving near the Swiss-Italian frontier."

This is the time to dye. All the tain doesn't wish, even if she should afford, to antagonize the people the neutral countries by interfering with their business more than is absolutely necessary.

With her own people she can deal one of two ways when she catches em. If the offence is not a serious one they may be dealt with under a new trading with the enemy Act, which provides for a fine of $5,000 or five years' imprisonment or both. If a British subject is caught supplying arms or military stores to the enemy he may be tried for high treason, for which the punishment is death.

An interesting situation is that in regard to copper. Copper may well be described as the life-blood of war, without it Germany cannot continue to fight long. It is used for machine cases, for shells, and for parts of machinery in connection with the guns on which Germany relies so much.

Copper, of course, is on the list of contraband, and under international law Great Britain has a perfect right to seize every cargo of copper which can prove to be destined for Germany. At the beginning of the war did so, and, as a matter of fact, is still doing so, but she has run against a very difficult situation. The copper supply of the world is controlled largely by the Guggenheim interests. Britain, as well as many, must buy her copper from them, and the Guggenheims don't like the idea of their cargoes which they have sold to the Germans being used by their other customer. Of course, Great Britain has scrupulously paid for all the copper that she has seized, but the result of the seizure has been to reduce her own supply of the metal. If she goes on seizing the copper magnates have threatened to cut off her own supply. One way out of the difficulty, of course, would be for Great Britain to take the entire available supply of copper, and she could well afford to do so.

There has been great difficulty in settling matters with Holland and Scandinavian countries, especially Sweden, on which Germany has relied as sources of supply for many years, and as gates through which she may receive goods from overseas. Great Britain does not desire quarrel with or to injure their trade more than is absolutely necessary for many reasons. One is that in normal times they are excellent customers of Britain and excellent friends as well.

The following figures will show you in a few articles of every day life how Germany has been drawing supplies from Great Britain itself through these neutral countries. In the months of September and October, 1913, Britain exported to Holland, 733,800 pounds of tea, and in the same period Holland exported to Germany many 1,028,356 pounds. In the corresponding two months of this year Britain exported to Holland 440,000 pounds of tea, and Holland sent 16,328,464 pounds to Germany. These figures are still more remarkable when we remember that many is not a tea-drinking country. In ordinary years she consumes about 9,000,000 pounds. The only conclusion we can draw, therefore, is that having seen how well the British troops fight on tea she has begun to serve it to her own soldiers. Similar figures show how she has been drawing cocoa and coffee from Britain. In the same two months of 1913 Great Britain exported to all European countries 2,-

Remarkable Endurance of the Pearl Fishers of Torres.

The greatest depth recorded of work done by a diver in a suit is 182 feet. This depth was reached by the Spanish diver, Angel Erostarbe, who recovered $45,000 in silver ingots from the wreck of the steamship Skyroff Cape Finisterre. The sponge divers of the Mediterranean work at a maximum of 150 feet and the Australian pearlers at 120 feet.

The greatest depths reached by divers without apparatus are used by the pearl fishers of Torres, mostly Malaysians from the smaller islands. They go down with the aid of a stone and a loop in the rope thereto attached which they clutch with their toes, these organs being far more prehensile than in races normally shod. They seldom venture to descend below fifty feet, a depth at which they can remain for two minutes. The stone enables them to remain at the bottom while they are sweeping the pearl oysters into a basket attached to the stone. When the diver feels that he must come up to breathe he releases his toes from the becket in the rope and at once floats to the surface.

Young and healthy Malayan divers working oyster beds below six fathoms make four descents an hour during four hours in the morning and the same during four hours in the afternoon following a four hour rest. A civilized man at a depth of forty-two feet finds such a dive intolerable after a single minute.—New York Sun.

The Gorgons.

The Gorgons were creatures of Greek mythology, mentioned by Homer and Euripides as being of peculiarly abhorrent aspect. Their hair was composed of serpents, their bodies covered with scales and girdled with reptiles with heads erect, vibrating their tongues threateningly, while the hands of the Gorgons, adorned with sharp talons, were of brass. The gaze of the monsters was deadly, all upon whom they fixed their eyes being turned to stone. One of the three terrible sisters was conquered and beheaded by Perseus, and as he took flight in the air en route for Ethiopia, holding the severed head in his hands, the drops of blood which fell from it became serpents, which ever after infested the sands of Libya.

"Not Like Us."

Mrs. Anderson's husband is Scotch. Mrs. Anderson is an American woman, and she has in her employ as black a cook as ever descended from Ham. One day the cook said to her mistress: "Yo' husband he ain't no 'Merican, is he?" "Oh, no, Phoebe, he is a Scotchman," replied Mrs. Anderson. "Well," said the cook, "I could see he wasn't like us, missus."—New York Post.

communications. The danger to the Germans is greatest from the north, where they are advancing in the angle between the San and the Vistula.

The Russians have taken several villages west of Nisko. Gen. Mackensen, to save his centre, has had to weaken it by detaching reinforcements for southern Poland. The Germans have been unable to keep up that ring of fire that was to have swept the Russians out of Galicia. They have also begun to economize their shells. Their hope of success lay in speed. Their plan is breaking down, because their aim was to win a short, decisive and tremendous battle, but the battle is dragging, their centre is held, and this big effort is crumbling up into a number of smaller battles.

THIRD ARMY WINNING

The heroic third Russian army has not belied its reputation by its magnificent stand on the San. It has foiled the German hopes instead of one vast sweep. The Germans are now reduced to a sort of general reconnaissance for possible weak points along the whole front. Their chief aim for the moment are to envelop Peremyshl and to secure command of the Biester southpass of Peremyshl. They are violently attacking at Husakow, and between the Strzj and Drohobycz Rivers they are struggling to reach the big river that guards the approaches to the Carpathians. The first fierce tussle is over. The Russians have not given way, and the battle will now be a long one with a great deal of manoeuvring, but the Russians by gaining time have already defeated the original German plan.

BRUTALITY TO PRISONERS

The Germans are displaying in their treatment of Russian prisoners amazing brutality. They drowned one party of Russian prisoners in the San. Five Russian prisoners a German officer shot with his revolver and another Cossack has just escaped to the Russian lines after having had his ears snipped and strips of flesh cut out of his thighs for his refusal to give information as to the Russian positions.

On the Narew, on the east Russian front, the Germans have for the first time made use of asphyxiating gases.

and Italian troops are facing each other on the frontier, in some places only half a mile apart. The forces there are estimated at a million men on each side.

The Austro-German headquarters staff has arrived at Trent, and the Austrians have mounted artillery in the Stelvio Pass, which is still covered with snow. A continuous stream of troops from the Tyrol is arriving near the Swiss-Italian frontier.

KAISER ABANDONS HOPE IN GALICIA

PETROGRAD, May 24.—The Kaiser Saturday night left Jarosean, Galicia, and journeyed westward in the deepest dejection. Bulletins were drawn up before the train started.

Von Hindenburg had warned him that his plan of a terrific blow on a short front looked well on paper, but that the Russians were likely to frustrate it and entangle the German troops for several weeks. Von Hindenburg proved right, and Generals Mackensen and Von Emmich have abandoned the hopeless task of extricating the Germans from a 200 mile front. They have nobody to spare to resist the Russian advance from Pilsa, where thousands of prisoners are being taken daily. All the reserves available from inside of Germany are now moving thru Czenstochowa into Poland. None is going into Galicia, where the Russian army has secured the ascendancy, and is mercilessly slaughtering the Germans, whose artillery is silent and without shells. It is reported that the Kaiser at Cracow urged the Austrians to make an heroic endeavor. They have gone southward to reinforce Generals Beehm and Von Ernolis on the Italian frontier. The Kaiser proceeded to Breslau.

reply, that is a series of raids and depose, victory is satisfied with booty, new war comes when the need of more booty is felt in the domestic or in the village economy.

The visitor to the Balkan cities with their mixed populations has no difficulty in picking out the South Roumanian as he goes straight to his aim, with his intelligent and regular features and his free yet never bold glance. He is readily recognized on the streets by his white clothing, his springy step, breast out, white fez cocked over one ear, eyes alert to every passing event.

His family is the great thing to every South Roumanian, family first. He would count himself disgraced if one of his kin came upon strangers for relief. Beggars there cannot be for each has a family somewhere which will prevent him from the need of asking alms at the wayside. Political affiliations combine with this strength of family solidarity to attach him to the faith of his fathers with unshakable devotion. This faith chances to be the Greek-Oriental rite; to this he is unswervingly orthodox, any deviation from the prescriptions of the Orthodox Church seems to him a cardinal sin, Catholics and Protestants he looks upon as half heathen.

The women play a large part in the family life, they are the great conservative force in the preservation of the national spirit through all the assaults upon the nationality of these mountaineers which past ages have delivered in this caldron of the barbarian invader from the north, the Scythian from the east, the Tartar hordes from Asia, and last of all the Osmanli, who in these mountains won the mastery of the eastern empire of Rome. The tasks of the Wallach woman all lie within the house, she is never called upon for field labor. Every article of clothing is her handiwork. She spins, she weaves, she sews from year's end to year's end. When she goes abroad she never neglects to carry something with which her hands may be busy.

Object of Boy Scouting.

Character development, through an attractive yet wholesome program of activities and the required daily good turn by scouts and community service by groups of scouts is the fundamental object of scouting.

Every step in the scouting program is but a means to this end. The variety and interest as well as the practical knowledge insured by the tenderfoot second class and first class tests are, after all, but a means for holding the interest of the boy, pledged to the scout oath and law, under such leadership as will bring about character development. Likewise, the whole scheme of merit badges is primarily for the same purpose. The form of troop organization, the scout master and his assistants, the local council and indeed the national council and all of its officers are also but a means to this end.

This character development manifests itself in health, efficiency, chivalry, loyalty, patriotism and good citizenship.—From Annual Report of the Chief Scout Executive.

Rhode Island's Capitals.

Rhode Island adopted a constitution in 1842, which named five capitals for the state, designating Newport, South Kingston, Bristol, East Greenwich and Providence as the places for successive honor. In 1854 an amendment restricted the meeting places of the general assembly or legislature to two places—Newport and Providence. In 1900 Providence became the only seat of the legislature.

in which his battalion had 691 officers and men killed, wounded and missing. "Three companies," he writes, "were in the forward line of trenches, Osborne, McLaren and McGregor; Alexander and Cory were in reserve in St. Julien. The left flank of our line was held by French colonial troops, which broke and ran when the Germans gassed them. The Canadians had to step in and restore the line. They held it, but could not restore the old line."

WILL LIVE IN HISTORY.

In concluding his letter Col. Currie says the 48th have done a greater deed than any other Highland regiment in the war, or before it, and that the name of the regiment will live in history. He says the names of the Canadians are on the lips of the whole British army.

THE BATTLE CALL.

"I cannot tell you much about late events, only that on Thursday, the 23rd, we received word that the French had been forced to retire, and the enemy were advancing," says Bugler Alan Wraith of Stratford, one of the First Battalion. "and we went forward at the double. Capt. Delamere and our other officers were well in front of their men. We quickly began to feel the effects of the Germans poisonous shells and gas fumes and guessed we were up against it. Well, we sighted the enemy just as day dawned, and then the work started. I was ordered to sound the advance, and then with my bugle slung at my back, and my hands full of grenades (for I am a Grenadier now as well as a bugler to the battalion), we went forward yelling like demons. The Germans were holding a ridge a thousand yards off, but we still kept advancing—and so did the German bullets. Their rifles and machine guns laid whole rows of our boys low, tho they must be bad marksmen, as the majority of 'ours' only went under with wounds. The shells from their guns were making holes in the ground all around us, big enough for a man to hide in, but we didn't care."

FIVE TO ONE.

"Our blood was at fever heat and we dashed ahead, and I don't believe one of us had the slightest dread of danger. It seemed as if a mad feeling had come over us and we wanted to get at 'em cold steel, from which they squirm like stuck pigs, and they were soon on the run. We got into their trenches and held them all day until reinforcements came up. It was a glorious fight, but, alas, at what a dear cost: I seem to have been in luck, for tho having had two very narrow escapes, I came thru unhurt, tho two on one side and three on the other side of me went under."

"The dastardly Huns are fiends at a distance, but face to face with a Canuck they are cowards and whine for mercy like little kids. I cannot tell you any more now, but rely upon it we are all doing our duty, tho it is hard work."

DESPERATE POSITION

"When the French were driven back by the gas fumes, the position of our battery became desperate," wrote Bombardier W. D. Dodd.

"Our horse lines were some three miles away, and an orderly was despatched to bring up the teams to get out the guns," writes Dodd. "Our brigade headquarters were shelled out and they came into us under a hot fire. Anxious thoughts followed the mounted messenger as we saw the fearful high explosives bursting along the road he had to travel. All the pieces, just outside the trench, the battery is extended to 50 yards between sections. Then 'gallop' the large cobblestones, down r shell-shattered streets. ### A STRANGE PEOPLE.

Wallachs of the Balkans Who Claim They Are Romans.

At the southern fringe of the Balkan states, in Macedonia, in Greece, in Turkey, even in Anatolia, is found a hardy race of shepherds, diligent in the care of their own sheep, inveterate lifters of flocks over the border, men who know that the shepherds' crook needs but to be inverted to be an effective pike. They have a dozen names, each of their neighbors has a differing designation, they are best known as the Vlach or Wallachs. But when asked to tell who they are and what their race they show pride of ancestry in saying that they are Romans.

Even when one is the anachronism of a border pricker, a reeve of one's neighbor's sheep and of one's neighbor's daughter, it is yet something fine to be able to say "I am Roman."

In the pride we are ready to forgive the larceny, all the more since these Romans of the southern Balkans live where runs no writ of king nor has run for this thousand years. It is inspiring to remain a Roman, citizen of no mean city, in the midst of the barbarian. The title of these shepherds in their militancy is better than most such proud boasts. The union of the Dacians with the peninsular Latin folk yielded the three allied groups of Roumanians, South Roumanians and Istrians.

There is nothing of milk and water in their stirring history. When men fought they fought hard, they fought until they were victorious or were whipped. There is abundance of the shedding of blood, the blow is quite as often in the dark, the popular hero closes his reign at the point of a traitor dirk. In other words the Balkan mountains have continued the middle ages down into the 20th century.

National feeling runs strong among the South Roumanians, yet it has not come into the state of national unity. Each village chief is capable of acting for himself and for the men of his valley, war is a series of raids and repose, victory is satisfied with booty, new war comes when the need of more booty is felt in the domestic or in the village economy.

The visitor to the Balkan cities with their mixed populations has no difficulty in picking out the South Roumanian as he goes straight to his aim, with his intelligent and regular features and his free yet never bold glance. He is readily recognized on the streets by his white clothing, his springy step, breast out, white fez cocked over one ear, eyes alert to

A Glorious Page Has Been Written For the Gallantry of Canadian Soldiers

"A glorious page has been written in the gallantry and conspicuous bravery of the Canadian soldiers. No praise can be too high for their unswerving fortitude and valorous action, but the sorrow of it all is that to win the day entailed such a heavy casualty list. We all mourn our brave comrades who fell during those fateful days and join in deep sorrow with the bereaved ones at home and those who suffer anxious hours thru the lack of particulars of their wounded ones. Everything possible was done for them and it is thought 70 per cent. will recover.

The above is an extract from a brief letter written by Brigadier-General Mercer, commander of the Ontario or First Brigade, to his brother in Toronto.

"When the records of these battalions are published they will fill many pages of illustrious deeds, but I refrain from mentioning them now," says the brigadier-general, "as the glory of the hour cannot outweigh the personal grief we all feel thru the sudden taking off of the heroic dead of our brigade and comrades of the Canadian division. We are hastily re-organizing and expect to be sent forward again very shortly."

Brigadier-General Mercer continued to say:

"We are in rest billets after our recent experiences from the night of the 22nd of April to the 2nd of May. How any one came out of these days especially the 23rd, 24th and 25th of April, can only be ascribed to a merciful Providence, for shells fell like rain and machine gun and rifle fire was almost incessant, while gas bombs and trench gas appliances liberated poisonous fumes that blinded and rendered the strongest as helpless as little children.

A GALLANT HERO.

"Where all the battalions of the division did so well it is not possible to discriminate, unless the charge of the 4th Battalion, under Col. Birchall, is given signal mention. We deeply regret the loss of such a gallant officer and splendid friend. Tho twice wounded he continued to lead his battalion until he was fatally shot down. The first Battalion also distinguished itself, going forward with the 4th Battalion in the attack on Pilkem Ridge on the evening of the 23rd of April. Not less gallant was the work of the 2nd Battalion, under Col. Renne, both attached to the 3rd brigade in the attack on the St. Julien Ridge.

FILLING UP GAPS.

"They are rushing all the Canadian troops in England over here as fast as they can to make up for our casualties," wrote Lt.-Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., from billets in France, on the 5th inst. in a letter which was received by Mrs. Currie. Col. Currie tells more about the gallant fighting in which his battalion had 601 officers and men killed, wounded and missing. "Three companies," he writes, "were in the forward line of trenches, Osborne, McLaren and McGregor; Alexander and Cory were in reserve in St. Julien. The left flank of our line was held by French colonial troops, which broke and ran when the Germans gassed them. The Canadians had to step in and restore the line. They held it, but could not restore the old line.

time we sent shell upon shell into Germans in order to give our infantry opportunity to fall back into new without disorder. Ominous whistles of taking off the breech locks, leaving the guns useless and fighting our out, began to be heard.

BOYS WERE COOL.

"But at last we heard, amid shriek of shrapnel, the clatter of fire, and the devastating crash bursting 'coal boxes' and 'Johns' the galloping of hoofs, and so voice was heard in the darkness porting that the gun teams were h And yet there was the broken lin our left, with the Germans be rushed into the breach by thousa Yet our boys remained as cool as was a sham fight.

"Along came the order to cease hook in the teams and take up a sition in the newly formed line. was no time for taking thought kit, blanket, food, etc. What co be hastily lashed to the gun liml comprised all we were able to t with us. The flares of the enemy v lighting up the scene.

"Our infantry had been able to back, dig in and maintain connect with the left.

REQUIRES NERVE.

"What to do with the gas-stri and wounded men we had been s toring in the bomb-proof was next question, and it was decide carry them on the limbers (at t own request), to the first dress station. It was a difficult job to them up, but the alternative of leav them to the doubtful mercies of ' Bosches' was unthinkable. And last we were off thru rifle and s fire, and over roads now cut up shells, but rough at any time.

"We tore along at a pace that m the guns and timbers rock and he to the imminent peril of the gunn riding thereon. Now we come to beginning of a long straight stre which is being heavily shelled, and teams are halted for a few second give them wind for a top gallop al that hellish track. But, God praised, we are thru.

IN ACTION AGAIN.

"A little further at the trot, t we turn off the road, and 'All g action front.' Our guns are b enflamed by shrapnel; machine g are peppering steel upon our shields; horses and men are be shot down. In other words, the sition is untenable for artillery. teams are galloped up, hooked in, again are the guns brought safely under heavy fire. The road is pac with guns, infantry, wagons—yet splendid drivers get thru at top sp and take up another position i plantation at the head of a rise. Th we come into action, and take share in holding up this impetu German rush."

GALLOP THRU YPRES.

He tells of the battle still rag on April 28 and of the battery cha ing its position. The route Nest Ypres. "Just outside the city battery is extended to 50 yards tween sections. Then 'gallop' o the large cobblestones, down nar shell-shattered streets. The last worst spot is the Yser Canal brid and over this we travel at top sp and casualties must lie—it is no ti to stop. ### The Christmas Tree.

Teutzel, an antiquarian author says: "The ancient heathen sat for their houses between two cypress trees and ate and drank at turn of the year for nineteen days. May this not have been the origin of the Christmas tree and—who knows—the Gothic window like Thackeray and Dickens and a variety of other authors have taken Christmas gatherings and the Christmas tree, poetized them and perhaps exaggerated the custom in a kindly and led us astray about the origin of the practices of Christmas.

But Christmas was not celebrated in the first centuries of the Christian era, and there are indications in records of early Roman history of setting up of a decorated tree Christmas time and the presentation of gifts of fruit and toys. The Romans themselves are supposed to have taken the idea from the Egyptians.

Why Snow Is White.

Water being transparent rays light pass through it without being reflected by the water itself. W drops of water are partially frozen into snowflakes they are transformed into a crystal substance with a many reflecting surfaces, from which the rays of light are sent back just as a mirror reflects a great deal of the light or color thrown against it.

A mass of snow is whiter than a single flake, because of the countless number of crystals that are compactly grouped thereby greatly increasing the reflective power. In a mirror snow will reflect the color of any light thrown upon it.

"Quite the contrary, stranger. I man who owns that lot has too much public spirit to build on it."

"How do you make that out?" "That's where the circus show when it comes to town."

Written of Canadian Soldiers

time we sent shell upon shell into the Germans in order to give our infantry opportunity to fall back into new lines without disorder. Ominous whispers of taking off the breech locks, leaving the guns useless and fighting our way out, began to be heard.

BOYS WERE COOL.

"But at last we heard, amid the shriek of shrapnel, the clatter of rifle fire, and the devastating crash of bursting 'coal boxes' and 'Johnsons,' the galloping of hoofs, and soon a voice was heard in the darkness, reporting that the gun teams were here. And yet there was the broken line to be left, with the Germans being pushed into the breach by thousands. Yet our boys remained as cool as if it was a sham fight.

"Along came the order to cease fire, look in the teams and take up a position in the newly formed line. This was no time for taking thought for the blanket, food, etc. What could be hastily lashed to the gun limbers comprised all we were able to take with us. The flares of the enemy were ghting up the scene.

"Our infantry had been able to fall back, dig in and maintain connection with the left.

REQUIRES NERVE.

"What to do with the gas-stricken and wounded men we had been sheltering in the bomb-proof was the next question, and it was decided to bury them on the limbers (at their own request), to the first dressing station. It was a difficult job to get them up, but the alternative of leaving them to the doubtful mercies of 'Les osches' was unthinkable. And at last we were off thru rifle and shell fire, and over roads now cut up by shells, but rough at any time.

"We tore along at a pace that made the guns and limbers rock and heave, the imminent peril of the gunners ding thereon. Now we come to the beginning of a long straight stretch which is being heavily shelled, and the teams are halted for a few seconds to give them wind for a top gallop along at hellish track. But, God be praised, we are thru.

IN ACTION AGAIN.

"A little further at the trot, then a turn off the road, and 'All guns, front.' Our guns are being inflated by shrapnel; machine guns are peppering steel upon our gun fields; horses and men are being shot down. In other words, the position is untenable for artillery. The teams are galloped up, hooked in, and again are the guns brought safely out under heavy fire. The road is packed with guns, infantry, wagons—yet our dandied drivers get thru at top speed and take up another position in a twinkling at the head of a rise. There we come into action, and take our place in holding up this impetuous German rush."

GALLOP THRU YPRES.

He tells of the battle still raging on April 28 and of the batteries changing its position. The route lies thru Ypres. "Just outside the city the artillery is extended to 50 yards between sections. Then 'gallop' over the large cobblestones, down narrow well-shattered streets. The last and best spot is the Yser Canal bridge, and over this we travel at top speed. Casualties must lie—it is no time to stop. The German big guns have these places registered. Serving the guns needs all a man's courage to stand duty quietly and steadily, with shells bursting on every hand, when a casual look round reveals victims less fortunate than himself, when he sees

GENERAL STEELE AND TROOPS SAFE

Ottawa, May 24th.—Private advice received here announces the safe arrival in England of Gen. S. E. Steele, commandant of the second Canadian contingent, his staff, and the troops which went with him.

The general and his staff, the signal company of the Canadian Engineers, Ottawa, the 20th Battalion, and the ammunition column from Toronto were aboard the Megantic.

Later information which has been cabled over regarding the fighting in which the Canadian troops were engaged last Thursday night, shows that the casualties were not so numerous as supposed. The revised figures are 30 killed, 152 wounded and three missing.

GERMAN POISON GAS BREAKS BRITISH LINE

Poison proved effective to the east of Ypres early Sunday morning, as it did a month ago in the same region. Sir John French reported to the War Office that at three o'clock in the morning, under cover of poisonous gases, the German artillery began to fire shells, which also contained asphyxiating gas. The British troops were forced to evacuate some of their trenches, and the enemy penetrated the line in two or three places. When the report was sent fighting was still in progress, and some portions of the original front had been retaken.

This report will do much to end criticism of the announced intention of the British and French War Offices to meet poison with poison. The handicap under which the soldiers of the allied powers rest is too great to be continued. It is clear that under favorable conditions the Germans can send poisonous gases towards the British lines near Ypres in such volumes that respirators do not enable the men to face the deadly fumes. It is reported that an elaborate plant for the production and distribution of poisonous gases over a thirty mile front in Alsace is now in process of construction in the Muehausen district, where the Germans fear a French advance towards the Rhine. The Allies are not likely to let warfare of that sort to remain one-sided indefinitely.

ITALIANS 15 MILES ACROSS BORDER

ROME, May 25.—Italian forces have crossed the Austrian frontier at least 15 miles, and are threatening the city of Goritz, capital of the Province of the same name. Instead of striking north into Tyrol, they have struck east into Trieste, reaching beyond the Isonzo River, between that river and the Idria.

The invading forces comprised a body of troops supporting Italian cavalry, who earlier in the day were reported to have driven in the Austrian outposts. The Italians crossed the Judrio River, forming the boundary, without serious opposition, and advanced into the valley between the Idria and the Isonzo.

Cormons, the Austrian frontier town of four thousand inhabitants, was first occupied. It lies directly over the Austrian frontier. First despatches to the War Office did not indicate whether the enemy resisted the advance of the Italian troops at this point. The town of Cervignano, south of Goritz, with a population of 2,500, was occupied by the right wing of the invading army, while other Italian forces were entering the village of Terzo.

CAPORETTO WAS OCCUPIED.

The town of Caporetto, thirty miles north of Goritz, was occupied by the Italian left wing, indicating that the invading force was of larger size than earlier reports indicated. The Austrians everywhere are withdrawing several miles inside the frontier, destroying bridges and leveling all buildings that might be used by the invaders for military purposes.

Italian troops have been landed inside the Austrian frontier, near the head of the Adriatic. They have encountered only slight resistance and are moving northward to effect a junction with the army about to attack Goritz.

At several points along the border the Italian forces were met by a desultory artillery fire. When Italian artillerymen answered, the Austrians quickly withdrew.

The official statement says: "On the Carniole front Austrian artillery opened fire against our position without results. During the day

"On the Friuli front our troops everywhere and encountered only feeble resistance. We have occupied Caporetto, the heights between the Idria and Isonzo Rivers, Cormons, Cervignano, and Terzo. The enemy withdrew, destroying bridges and burning houses.

"Our torpedo destroyers opened fire against the enemy's detachments at the port of Busco, and have disembarked troops. We captured 70 Austrians who have been sent to Venice. Our losses were one dead and some wounded."

Ten minutes later, from the rear deck of a ferryboat in midstream—a boat bearing back to New York not only the touring car of White Face, but the cab of Mr. Barcus—the latter gentleman formed one of a small but interested audience witnessing an incident of uncommon character.

He saw a young man, hatless, coatless, almost shirtless, tear down to the edge of one of the Jersey wharves, his heels snapped at by a ravening rabble, jump aboard a square-rigged vessel which lay moored there, and execute a maneuver of despair by climbing up the rigging in a hopeless attempt to escape his persecutors. They were too many for him, and what was worse they were headed by a squad of police apparently as grimly bent on compassing the destruction of their quarry as was the mob.

And they swarmed up the rigging after him without a moment's hesitation.

Hotly pressed, the fugitive climbed higher and still higher, until at length he gained the topmost yard; with three policemen not half a dozen feet below him and popping away for dear life, if happily with the notoriously poor marksmanship of policemen generally.

None the less, there was no telling when some accident might wing a bullet into the young man; and it was evident that he so decided.

For, inching out to the end of the yard, he waved his hand toward his persecutors with a gesture of light-hearted derision that unmistakably identified him as Alan Law to Mr. Barcus, and forthwith dropped to the water, feet foremost.

Alan later took the water neatly, came up uninjured and clearheaded, and without an instant's hesitation struck away toward the middle of the Hudson.

As this happened the police ran to the stern of the square-rigger, unmoored a dory that was riding there, and threw themselves into it.

During the (to Barcus, at least) breathless suspense of that chase, the ferryboat drew stolidly farther and still farther away from the scene. Barcus could not tell whether, as it seemed, the police-laden dory was really overhauling Alan, or whether the illusion of perspective deceived him.

At all events, it seemed a frightfully near thing when the interruption befell which alone could have saved Alan.

Out of the very sky dropped a hydro-aeroplane, cutting the water with a long, graceful curve that brought it, almost at a standstill, directly to the head of the swimmer, and at the same time forced the police boat to sheer widely off in order to escape collision.

Immediately the swimmer caught the pontoon of the hydro-aeroplane not Rose is to participate in this hegira, but I know I shall. On the off-chance of being useful, I have bribed the train crew to let me impersonate the porter. So, should you be moved to follow and succeed in catching up with us, and observe anybody who looks rather off-color in the party—don't shoot: the said party will be me.

"Yours for the quiet life,

"TOM BARCUS."

The second note yielded a communication written on notepaper of the simplest elegance in a woman's hand—a hurried scrawl:

"They are taking me West by special train—I don't know where or why. A servant has promised to see that this reaches you. Save me!"

Over this Alan wrinkled an incredulous nose. The hand was the hand of Rose, but the phraseology was not in her spirit. He examined it more closely and thought to detect beneath its semblance of haste a deliberate and carefully guided pen. He picked up the envelope to compare the handwriting of the address with that of the enclosure—and shook out a Trey of hearts.

This last was covered, as to its face, with a plainly-written message.

"With the compliments of Seneca Trine to Alan Law. We are due in Chicago at eleven tomorrow morning and leave immediately for the Pacific coast via Santa Fe route."

Comparison between this and the message purporting to be from Rose distilled the conviction that the same hand was responsible for both.

Alan shrugged. So he was to be lured away from New York and Rose by this transparent trick, was he? No fear!

He glanced at his watch, finding the hour far too early to attempt what he had in mind.

With plenty of time on his hands, he gave the matter serious consideration and concluded to take no chances: it was just possible that Trine had taken Rose with him on his western trip, after all. In such case the only possible way of overtaking the special would be by air line.

Promptly Alan called up the aviation fields at Hempstead Plains and got into communication with a gentleman answering to the surname of Coast: the same birdman who had come to Alan's rescue with his hydro-aeroplane.

Their arrangements were quickly consummated, Coast agreeing to wait for Alan with his biplane in Van Cortlandt park from midnight till daybreak, prepared if need be to undertake a transcontinental flight.

Thereafter Mr. Law proceeded to rehabilitate himself in decent clothing and his own esteem; after bathing, he dined alone in his rooms, from a tray;

after dining he slept soundly for three

figure of a maid-servant in cap and gown, her mouth still wide and full of sound—and Alan fell upon the guard like a thunderbolt. The man had barely time to jump up and recognize the alarm: then a fist caught him on the point of his jaw, and he returned promptly to deep unconsciousness.

No time now for qualms of compunction on account of the savage ruthlessness of that blow: no time even to search the fellow for a key to the closed door: already the maid was taking the stairs in full flight and cry, four steps and a howl like a warlock's to every jump.

Backing off, Alan took a short run, cleared the prostrate body of the guard with a leap, and flung himself full force against the door, his shoulder striking a point nearest the lock. With a splintering crash it broke inward. Without dignity or decorum he sprawled on all fours into the presence of Judith Trine.

"Poor Mr. Law!" she cried, with a mocking nod, "always disappointed! I'm so sorry—truly I am!"

"Oh, spare me your sarcasm," he begged resentfully. "It's ridiculous enough, this whole mad business—"

"But I am not sarcastic," she insisted with such sincerity that he opened his eyes in wonder. "Believe me, I am sorry for once it is I and not Rose whom you find locked up here! For, you see, I am locked up, by way of punishment—thanks to my having had pity on you once too often—while my father decamps mysteriously for parts unknown—"

"You don't know where he's gone, then?"

"Do you?" she asked sharply.

"In a general way. By special train to the West—"

"Taking Rose?"

"So I'm told."

The woman choked upon her anger, but quickly mastered it.

"He shall pay for this!" she asseverated.

"Your father? I wish him nothing more nor less than your enmity," Alan assured her civilly. "But since it seems that he has gone, and Rose with him, if you'll forgive me, I think I'll be going—"

"Alone?"

That one word, uttered with all the significance that this woman knew so well how to infuse into her tone, checked him suspiciously on the threshold.

"Why—yes."

"You wouldn't care for a companion du voyage?" she suggested.

"Oh—really!" he protested.

She held up an arresting hand. "Listen!" she begged.

From the street below came the unmistakable rattle of a policeman's locust on the sidewalk.

"That damned maid," Alan divined thoughtfully.

"The same," Judith agreed with ominous calm. "Has it struck you that you may have some trouble getting away without my permission?"

"I'm not so stupid as not to have thought of that," he countered.

"Then be advised—and take me with you."

"In what capacity, please? As enemy or ally?"

"As ally—you're right: we can't be friends—until we overtake that special train. After that, by your leave, I'll shift for myself."

"It's not such a bad notion," he reflected: "with you under my eye, you can't do much to interfere—"

landscape. Only at the third cast they succeed in picking up the line of the Santa Fe. And it was some hours later, though still daylight, when they picked up the special train, flying a bunting across the levels.

There was scant room for doubt that it was the train they sought. The details are not common. Moreover, contrived with considerable difficulty to focus binoculars upon the rear of the car, and caught a fugitive glimpse of a white-coated figure with black face that was watching the plane in the same manner, that with glasses.

The man in the white coat, Alan assured himself, was positively Barcus. And hardly had he comforted himself with this assurance when his fateful destiny struck the motor dory.

In response to his look of despair the aviator merely shook his weary head and muttered the words "Engine trouble."

Swiftly the earth rose to receive the volplaning mechanism. Under Co's admirable handling it settled down

Before he was fairly seated the plane was swinging back into its fastest pace.

With the ease of a wild goose it left the water, mounted the long grade of an air lane, described a wide circle above the bluffs of Weehawken, and swept away southward.

In that quarter it was presently lost to the sight of Mr. Barcus, engulfed in light folds of haze that were creeping in from seawards to dim and tarnish the pristine brilliance of that day.

CHAPTER XXX.

Birdman.

About eight o'clock in the evening of the same day a motorcar deposited at the Hotel Monolith a gentleman whose weather-beaten and oil-stained motor-cap and duster covered little clothing more than shirt and trousers and assorted oddly in the eyes of the desk-clerk with the rather meticulously turned-out guest known to him as Mr. Arthur Lawrence and to the management of the hotel as Mr. Alan Law incognito.

Eventually persuaded, the clerk yielded up the key to Mr. Lawrence's suite of rooms, together with two notes superscribed with the same nom de guerre.

Alan's impatience was so great that he could hardly wait to examine these communications until he was quit of the public eye.

The first proved to be a characteristic communication.

"Dear Ulysses—Thanks for the jail delivery. I got in this morning just in time to motor over to Jersey in hopes of seeing your finish as a bachelor; instead, I was favored by being made an involuntary witness to your spectacular ascent, following your almost equally spectacular high-dive.

"But to business: my time is limited; in half an hour more I am to double in black-face for the purposes of the author of this melodramatic farce which you, no doubt, call the history of your grande passion.

"I mean to say—well, several things, to-wit: When I saw you snatched out of the North river I was engaged in trailing a pale-faced villain in a motorcar concerning whom you probably know far more than I; he on his part was busy being a bold, bad kidnaper; Rose was in his power, as we say in such cases. His intentions, however, were nothing more blameworthy than to return her to the arms of her doting parent. I know, because I sleuthed after 'em, even to the house of Seneca Trine. Later I sleuthed some more, following a furtive young man from the house of Trine to the office of the general manager of the New York Central, where he made arrangements for a special to convey the said Trine and retinue to Chicago and points West. It leaves at three this afternoon. I was unable to ascertain whether or not to take to the water with the hydro-aeroplane.

Their arrangements were quickly consummated, Coast agreeing to wait for Alan with his biplane in Van Cortlandt park from midnight till daybreak, prepared if need be to undertake a transcontinental flight.

Thereafter Mr. Law proceeded to rehabilitate himself in decent clothing and his own esteem; after bathing, he dined alone in his rooms, from a tray;

after dining he slept soundly for three hours—and may be thought to have earned at least that much rest through having been for four hours a passenger in a hydro-aeroplane lost in fogs that wrapped Long Island and all the adjacent territory in an impenetrable shroud.

Nor had this been all. Leaving aside all that had led up to Alan's rescue by Coast: the forced landing of the hydro-aeroplane for lack of fuel had taken place on the south shore of the Great South Bay; a search of hours had followed before a boat was found to convey Alan and the aviator to the mainland; and a motor run of several hours had followed that, conveying Coast to his Hempstead hangars and Alan on to his hotel in New York.

Another man would have needed twelve hours in bed at the least to compensate for such a day: Mr. Law awakened in a lamb-like temper when called at eleven-thirty.

At midnight he committed an act of burglary, calmly and with determination breaking his way into the house of Seneca Trine through the area windows and basement.

In this nefarious business nothing hindered and none opposed him. But for a single lighted window in the upper tier (but not, he noted, the window to Rose's bedchamber) and one or two lights which he found burning dim in the kitchen offices and other servants' quarters on the lower floor he would have thought the house empty. The silence of an abandoned place informed it all—below the upper story. But he was not to be satisfied with such negative evidence: he explored the dwelling minutely, room by room, story by story, passing with little interest through apartments by every sign dedicated to the tendency of his mortal enemy, intent on one object only—to find Rose Trine, that one woman whom he loved, or else make sure she was not there.

He negotiated that last flight of steps which led to the topmost floor with extraordinary stealth, advised thereto by a sound, or rather a series of sustained sounds, which had theretofore been inaudible to him. Possibly they had not till then existed; possibly the man servant whom he found snoring in a chair outside a closed door had not fallen asleep and begun to snore until the moment when Alan set foot upon the lower step of that final ascent.

Turning the head of the stairs, Alan paused for a little, speculatively intent on this man who must somehow be disposed of before he might solve the secret of that shut and guarded door.

Aside from actual violence no solution offered to the puzzle—and violence was abruptly forced upon him.

No sound warned him of the door that opened at his back as he stood watching the sleeping guard. A piercing shriek was the first intimation he received that his presence had been discovered. It served as well to move him instantly into action: a single glance overshooulder showed him the

"I'm not so stupid as not to have thought of that," he countered.

"Then be advised—and take me with you."

"In what capacity, please? As enemy or—ally?"

"As ally—you're right: we can't be friends—until we overtake that special train. After that, by your leave, I'll shift for myself."

"It's not such a bad notion," he reflected: "with you under my eye, you can't do much to interfere—"

"If I promise—" she suggested.

"I'll take your word," he agreed simply. "But you're in for a lot of hardship, I'm afraid. The one way to catch up with your father is by aeroplane—and I've got one waiting."

She nodded intently. "Don't consider me as a woman when it comes to hardship," she hinted obliquely.

"I've no reason to, going on what I know of you."

"Give me one minute to find my coat and hat."

In less than that time she was at his side in the hallway.

The police entered by the front door as the two crept out of the area window.

Via Air Line.

Not once in the course of the next sixteen hours but a thousand times Alan questioned (and, it will readily be allowed, with all excuses) his sanity in permitting himself to be influenced to humor Judith's insistence and make her a party to this wild aerial cross-country dash.

Between whiles the plane flew fast and high, cutting a direct line, as the crow flies, athwart the eastern and western states.

Chicago they raised as a smudge on the northern horizon about one o'clock in the afternoon; thereafter some little time was lost in descents to ascertain the identity of the many railroad lines that criss-crossed the swimming

For the biplane was barely at a standstill before he was out and, with the giddiness that affects after long flights, making his way best he might toward the man's office connected with a trainyard immediately adjacent to the spot where they had come to earth.

These Wonderful Tablets,

The Blood.

Pure, rich blood can flow only in a clean body. Now, a clean body is one in which the waste matter is regularly and naturally eliminated from the system. The blood cannot be pure when the skin action is weak, when the stomach does not digest the food properly, when the bowels do not move regularly, when the kidneys are rained or overworked.

Pure blood is the result of perfect health and harmony of stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives", by their wonderful action on all these organs, keeps the whole system as clean as Nature intended our bodies to be clean.

"Fruit-a-tives" tones up, invigo-disappearance. Only at the third cast did they succeed in picking up the line of Santa Fe. And it was some hours later, though still daylight, when they climbed up the special train, flying like arrows across the levels.

There was scant room for doubt that it was the train they sought. Special are not common. Moreover Alan trived with considerable difficulty to focus binoculars upon the rear platform of the car, and caught a fugitive glimpse of a white-coated figure with a dark face that was watching the train in the same manner, that is, with binoculars.

The man in the white coat, Alan assured himself, was positively Barcus.
And hardly had he comforted himself with this assurance when his sarcasm struck the motor dumb.
In response to his look of dashed hope the aviator merely shook a gray head and muttered the words:
"Engine trouble."

Swiftly the earth rose to receive the sliding mechanism. Under Coast's skillful handling it settled down al-

only clear track between it and the special.

The several hours that ensued before the rear lights of the special were brought to view were none too many for the task imposed upon Alan of overcoming the scruples of the engineer and fireman.

Another minute, and less than fifty feet separated the two—the special train and the light engine, both hurtling through the light at top speed.

With a word to the engineer Alan crept out along the side of the boiler, with only a greasy handrail and a narrow foothold between himself and what meant death, or something closely resembling it, should he be shaken off by the tearing wind and the swaying of the locomotive.

It seemed an hour before he worked himself up to the cowcatcher—now within four feet of the rear platform of the special.

On this last he could see a woman's figure indistinctly silhouetted against the light through the door, and beside her a man in a white coat, clinging for dear life to the knob of the door—holding it against the frantic efforts of some persons inside to tear it open.

Another hour of suspense dragged out—or such was the effect—while the light engine with intolerable slowness bridged those four scant feet.

At length it was feasible to attempt the thing. Rose (he could see her strained white face quite plainly now)
was half over the rail of the car ahead,
ready to jump.

His heart failed him. It was too hazardous a risk. He dared not let her take it.

Something very like a shot sounded from the train and something very like a bullet whistled past his cheek, and proved the signal for several more.

Strangely, that knowledge steadied his nerves. Straining forward and holding on to a bar so hot that it scorched his palm, he offered a hand to the girl on the rail.

Her hand fell confidently into it. She jumped. His arm wound round her as she landed on the platform of the cow-catcher. He heard her breathe his name, then hurriedly passed her between himself and the boiler to the footway at the side. The fireman was waiting there to help her. Alan turned his attention to Barcus.

To his dismay he found that the engine was losing ground. The space was widening rapidly as Barcus released the knob and threw himself over the rail.

By a miraculous, flying leap, the man accomplished that incredible feat
and gained the platform.

An instant later ten feet separated
the engine from the special, as the engineer applied the brakes.

And this he did none too soon: for at the same time Marrophat and another appeared on the rear platform and opened a hot, but, thanks to the widening distance, ineffectual fire.

The engine ground slowly to a halt
as the rear lights of the special train swept from sight round a bend.

man, who, it appeared, had stunned himself in falling and remained in-

The appearance of Law and Judith from behind the tender, closely pursued by the engineer, who was in turn closely pursued by gentlemen with revolvers, stirred Barcus and Rose to action. Alan passed him at a round pace, pausing only long enough to seize Rose and drag her with him toward the special. Judith flung him a phrase of well-meant advice in passing:

"Come along, you simpleton—unless you want to be shot down where you stand!"

Mr. Barcus acted on that advice, as immediately as resentfully. Judith Trine was little before him at the steps of the Pullman: Mr. Law had already assisted Rose aboard. Mr. Barcus ungraciously gave place to the lady: his ingrained chivalry sorely

CHAPTER XXXII.

Light Engine.

Toward the close of that summer's day it was the whim of that arch-manager of theatricals whom men call Fate to stage an anticlimax in the midst of a vast and hilly expanse of desolate middle western country—a rude and rugged disk of earth which boasted no human tenancy within a circle of its far-flung horizon and was bisected, not neatly, rather irregularly, by the flowing double line of steel ribbons which marked the railroad's right of way over the old Santa Fe trail.

So much for the stage: the light effects were provided exclusively by the crimson and purple and gold of a portentous sunset; the properties employed were simply a special train and what is known as a light engine (meaning a locomotive unhandicapped by cars); audience there was none, if one except the actors—who were one and all far too deeply preoccupied with the interpretation of their several roles
 to be aware of the show.

They were not many in number:
 perhaps half a dozen aboard the special train—which was making away as fast as it could run toward the glory of the sunset; as many more aboard
 the light engine.

It was the engineer who started the trouble. After bringing his monster to a full pause, he turned upon his passengers and—not without plausible excuse—violently indicted Mr. Alan Law for abuse of his and his fireman's trustfulness. This the said fireman (climbing forward over the tender) vigorously applauded.

They had been engaged, both gentlemen asserted vigorously, for nothing more dangerous than a quick run across the prairies, in furtherance of the unspecified plans of Mr. Alan Law and his companion, Miss Judith Trine.
 After starting out, they had wickedly and maliciously been bribed by the said Law to put on speed and catch up with the special, in order that he might rescue from the latter a young woman,
 his bride-to-be and the sister of Miss Trine.

But—and here was the grievance—they hadn't bargained to be shot at with pistols. And precisely that outrage had been put upon them during and subsequent to the moment of rescue.

It was unhappy Mr. Barcus who precipitated the affair. This gentleman was suffering from a severe sprain to his sense of decent pride. In the service of Miss Rose Trine and her betrothed, Mr. Law, Barcus had blackened his face and hands to the hue of ebony and had garmented himself in the garb of a Pullman porter, surrendering himself to humiliating service to those aboard the special, suffering their insolence and scorn without a murmur, but with the tides of wrath mounting ever higher in his bosom.

And now, when at length he had won his freedom from that ignominious servitude, it was only to be sworn at and vilified, as a common nigger, by railroad hands!

It was the fireman (to be just) who brought the row to a focus by a slight-ing reference to that "shiftless and misbegotten dinge."

He repented quite promptly. Mr.
 Barcus jumped for his throat with a

One of His Arms Was Around Her Shoulder.

bellow of rage. The brakeman leaped for his shovel and brandished it threateningly. Mr. Barcus made nothing of that: he closed in without hesitation and got the fireman by the throat, proceeding to shake the breath out of his body with the greatest good will and dispatch. In the course of this entertainment the fireman slipped on the cab platform, trod on nothing, and went over backwards, taking Mr. Barcus with him to the ballast.

At almost the same moment Mr.
 Law, attempting to restrain the engineer from going to the assistance of his fellow-worker, ducked in under a vicious swing for his chin, grappled with his foe, tripped him up—and went with his to the ground on the opposite side of the locomotive from that occupied by Mr. Barcus and the fireman.

For the next several seconds he was very busy indeed keeping his face out of the ballast. The engineer was a heavy man, but active and infuriated.
 He fought like a demon unchained. It was all very exciting. Mr. Law was even beginning to enjoy it when he heard a woman shriek. At the same instant revolvers began to pop.

Mr. Law released his foe almost as quickly as he was released. Both rose as one man, to find Judith Trine beside them, a little smile of excitement playing round her lips as she looked up the track and watched the special slow down to a stop—several persons on the back platform plying busy trigger-fingers all the while.

As these last threw open the platform gates and dropped to the ballast, still perforating the air with many bullets, Mr. Law, Miss Judith Trine, and that late belligerent, the engineer, turned simultaneously and sought the rear of the tender.

On the opposite side they found Rose Trine and Mr. Barcus standing uncertainly above the body of the fire-

lady: his ingrained chivalry sorely strained by bullets that kicked among the ballast round his feet.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Pullman.

"Come inside," Law suggested, "and introduce me to the brakeman. I presume I've got to fix things up with him—"

"If there's really any doubt in your mind as to that," Barcus said, rising,
 "I don't mind telling you you're right."

He paused as Alan entered the car before him and was greeted by a storm of vituperation that fairly blistered
 the panels of the Pullman. Mr. Seneca Trine, helpless in his invalid chair, thus celebrated his introduction to the young man whom he had never before seen whose life he had schemed to take these many years. His heavy voice boomed and echoed through the car like the sounding of a tocsin.

Alan made no effort to respond, but listened with his head critically to one side and an exasperating expression of deep interest informing his countenance until Mr. Trine was out of breath and vitriol; when the younger man bowed with the slightest shade of mockery in his manner and waved a tolerant hand to Barcus.

"He has, no doubt," Alan inquired,
 "his own private cell aboard this car?"

"Yes, suh!" Barcus agreed, aping well the manner of his apparent caste and color. "Ain't dat de troof?"

"Take him away, then," Alan requested wearily—"if you please."

"Yes, suh!" Barcus replied, with nimble alacrity seizing the back of the wheeled chair and swinging it round
 for a spin up the length of the car.

Before Trine had recovered enough to curse him properly, the door to his drawing room was closed and Barcus was ambling back down the aisle.

His grin of relish at this turning of the tables on the monomaniac proved, however, short-lived. It erased itself in a twinkling when Judith shouldered roughly past him, wearing a sullen and forbidding countenance, and flung herself into the drawing room with her father.

The cause of her temper was not far to seek: at the far end of the car Alan was bending solicitously over the chair in which Rose was resting. One of his arms was around her shoulder.
 Her face was lifted confidently to his.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, May 24.—Actual hostilities between Italy and Austria depressed the value of wheat today, but for the most part the effect of the clash had clearly been discounted in advance. The market closed unsettled at the same as Saturday night to  $\frac{1}{4}$ c down. In corn there was a gain of  $\frac{1}{4}$ c to  $\frac{1}{2}$ c net, oats finished  $\frac{1}{4}$ c to  $\frac{1}{2}$ c off to  $\frac{1}{2}$ c up, and provisions unchanged to 15c higher.

Scarcity of vessels appeared to hinder exports. No sales to foreigners were announced either at the seaboard or elsewhere. Meanwhile country offerings in the northwest increased somewhat, and more disposition was shown southwest to sell new crop winter wheat to arrive. A liberal decrease in the United States visible supply total seemed to have been even more fully anticipated than Italy's entry into the war.

Corn advanced owing to the smallness of the movement from rural sources, and owing to a falling off in terminal stocks. Leading shorts covered freely.

Oats felt the influence of increased hedging sales. Crop news was excellent.

Provisions hardened in price notwithstanding a decline in quotations for hogs. It was said the demand from Great Britain for meats had improved.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Kansas City, May 16. — Pastor Russell spoke here to-day on the text, "Shapen in iniquity, in sin did my mother conceive me."—Psalm 51:5.

The entrance of sin and its death-penalty into the world brought serious impairments — mental, moral and physical—to our race, the speaker said. It is no longer natural to do right, but contrariwise. As St. Paul declared, "We cannot do the things that we would." In other words, we are constitutionally defective, as a result of our first parents' disloyalty to God. Yet the mind can rise to loftier heights than it can lift the body. "To will is present with me, but how to perform I know not."

Many are grasping after this great truth, and attempting human uplift through eugenics, etc.; but they appreciate imperfectly what they teach, failing to see the matter from the Bible standpoint. The mind, the will, the body, should be entirely submitted to God's will. Thus only can the highest good be possible. This was God's requirement of our first parents. In this they failed; and in consequence mental, moral and physical impairment have come to us as a race.

The Pastor then showed that the Bible divides the world into two classes; the mass of sinners condemned of God and out of fellowship with Him, and the few who have come back into relationship with Him through the merit of Christ. The speaker addressed the world first, and suggested that while they cannot hope to lift themselves up to perfection and everlasting life, they can do much toward the uplift of themselves and their children by conforming to certain scriptural ideals.

All appreciate to some extent the value of a good example, of good training in the family. The child that continually hears coarse, rude expressions in the home will surely grow up not much better than those surroundings. But while encouraging high ideals in the home—cleanli-

Must Shut Windows.

LONDON, May 25.—An intimation that German Zeppelin airships probably will use bombs charged with poisonous gases, if they make a raid on London, is contained in a notice issued by Scotland Yard Friday night.

To the caution previously given that the public should take refuge in houses in order to be out of the way of the fragments of shells which might be fired at enemy aircraft is the following added injunction:

"It would be well for persons thus taking refuge to keep all windows and doors on lower floors closed, so as to prevent the admission of deleterious gas."

Seventeen German "Subs" Lost.

LONDON, May 25.—The Evening News has received a despatch from its Copenhagen correspondent, saying the report is current in German naval circles that seventeen submarines have been lost since February 18, the date of the commencement of the submarine blockade of England.

Fresh seeds, garden, flower and lawn in all the choice varieties at Hooper's—The Medical Hall.

speaker addressed the world last night, and suggested that while they cannot hope to lift themselves up to perfection and everlasting life, they can do much toward the uplift of themselves and their children by conforming to certain scriptural ideals.

All appreciate to some extent the value of a good example, of good training in the family. The child that continually hears coarse, rude expressions in the home will surely grow up not much better than those surroundings. But while encouraging high ideals in the home—cleanliness, gentleness, kindness—the Pastor called special attention to the duty of parents toward their children before birth. Few seem to realize that the general attitude of a mother's mind birthmarks her child for good or ill. If parents realized that noble words, conduct, thoughts and ideals would be imprinted upon their child, how greatly they would strive to have children that would be beautiful in appearance and noble in character!

Christian Ideals the Best.

God sets before the Christian the very highest ideals, the speaker declared: "Be like unto your Father in Heaven." Only God can know when His people are doing their best; and He assures them that He will judge them, not according to their success, but according to their endeavor, according to their ideals and their sacrifices made to attain those ideals. True Christians have been begotten of the Holy Spirit and adopted into the family of God. Ideal homes, ideal children, ideal relationships are pre-eminently their privilege and duty.

Having been taught in the School of Christ, true Christians understand that the Spirit of Christ manifests itself in meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly kindness and love; and that any other spirit is of the flesh and the Devil. They have adopted these ideals and are working along this line, despite their inherited weaknesses and blemishes.

Many are Christians in name only, having never entered into a covenant with the Lord, and therefore have neither part nor lot in the things of God. Others, truly His, have been sadly neglected as respects lessons in the School of Christ. The great religious institutions of the world are not teaching the highest ideals, but are separating the people from those ideals by misrepresentations of the Divine character and Plan. The Lord's people should awake to the situation, to their privileges as children of God, and to the true teachings of the Bible.

Business and Social Ideals.

The remainder of the discourse was devoted to the discussion of the Christian's ideal in business and social relationships. The Bible is addressed to Christians only. A Christian business man's ideal is the Golden Rule, which applies to his buying, his selling, his advertising, his dealings with his clerks as well as with his customers. More and more the Golden Rule is being appreciated by the public, and whoever follows it will receive a blessing. But whether so doing bring much or little success, the Christian business man must follow it.

The true Christian should remember that nothing less than the Golden Rule may be followed at any time. He must see that his children, his chickens, his dog, etc., do not disturb his neighbors in their proper rights. He must do for any one in distress what he would have a neighbor do for him if he were in trouble. He is to do good to all, especially unto the Household of Faith.

There's no excuse today for over the 1915 Maxwell.

We give you the two vital that have made the 1915 Max

Here are the two vital things that any sane man wants when he buys an automobile

In the first place

—a handsome, real automobile that he can be proud to ride in.

In the second place

—a powerful, fast, economical automobile that will take him anywhere and bring him back.

Read This List of Expensive

Attractive Streamline Body

Pure streamline body; graceful crown fenders, with all rivets concealed. All the grace, style and "snap" that you will find in any of the highest priced cars.

A High-Tension Magneto

Nearly all the high priced cars have high tension magnetos. A high tension magneto gives positive ignition. The Simms magneto, with which the Maxwell is equipped, is recognized as one of the best magnetos made.

Left Side Drive—Central Control

Left side steer with gear shifting levers in center of driving compartment—center control—has been accepted by leading makers of expensive automobiles as the safest and most comfortable for the driver; that is why the Maxwell has it. The Maxwell is so easy to drive and control that a child can handle it.

Three-Speed Sliding Gear Transmission

All high priced cars have a sliding gear transmission. It is costly to make, but it is the best. If the motor has the power, sliding gears will pull the car out or has a three-speed because Maxwell other type to be v

FIERCE BLOWS TO BE STRUCK AGAINST ITALY

London, May 24th—Little or no time has been allowed to elapse between the declaration of war and actual fighting between Italy and Austria. Early this morning Austrian aeroplanes, destroyers and torpedo boats descended on the Italian coast of the Adriatic and bombarded towns including Venice; while in the Tyrol and on the eastern frontier Italian and Austrian advance guards are ready in touch and have fired first shots.

The plan of campaign has not been disclosed, but it is generally believed that attempts to inflict a quick and decisive defeat, or, at least, that will discourage the Italians, be undertaken, largely by the Ger

We give you these two vital things, and then just about every other detail of refinement, comfort and endurance that you can think of.

Take power and hill-climbing ability, for example—when you buy a 1915 Maxwell you buy an exact duplicate of the stock Maxwell cars in which "Wild Bill" Turner and "Billy" Carlson broke two World's Records in two of the toughest, roughest mountain hill-climbs ever made—Mt. Hamilton and Mt. Wilson.

Take speed and endurance, for example—when you buy a Maxwell you buy a car made by the same designers—the same chief engineer—from the same Maxwell Laboratory, heat-treated, tested steel, that was used in the Maxwell Racers in which Barney Oldfield and "Billy" Carlson both broke the 300-mile non-stop race records in Corona and San Diego.

The Maxwell radiator is of handsome design, gracefully curved, and it is built to be trouble proof. It is the expensive double shell type and has ample cooling capacity. The radiator is mounted to the frame by means of a shock absorbing device on each side, which relieves the radiator of all twists and distortions of the frame, caused by roughness of the road. The shock absorbing device also minimizes the possibility of radiator leaks.

Low "Up-keep" Carburetor

The carburetor used on the Maxwell was especially designed for it after long and severe tests under every conceivable condition. Economy tours conducted by hundreds of dealers and owners in different sections of the country have proved its efficiency, its quick response to throttle and its extremely low consumption of gasoline. It has been termed the "low up-keep" carburetor.

Irreversible Steering Gear

The greatest margin of safety has been provided in the steering gear of the 1915 Maxwell. The Maxwell irreversible steering mechanism is of the expensive worm-and-gear type and its superiority over every other type lies in its many adjustments. At no time is more than a fourth of the bearing surface of the gear which operates the worm in use. When needed, a new bearing surface may be had by adjusting the gear a quarter of a turn. In short, the Maxwell steering gear has four times the adjustment of any other kind.

Heavy Car Comfort

What surprises most people is the smooth, buoyant riding qualities of the Maxwell. The spring suspension of the 1915 Maxwell is the same costly combination of long semi-elliptical front springs and the three-quarter elliptic rear springs that is used on most heavy weight, high priced cars. The Maxwell offers you every essential of the highest priced machines at a fifth of their cost.

One Size of Tire—Anti-Skids on Rear

The Maxwell car is one of the easiest cars in the world on tires. Maxwell owners carry but one spare tire and but one size of spare tubes. Economical 30 inch x 3 1/4 inch tires are used all around. A famous make of anti-skid tires are supplied on rear wheels.

A Dependable Electric Starter

For $70 extra, you can have your Maxwell delivered equipped with the famous Simms-Huff electric starter. This starter is efficient, trouble proof and easily operated.

And the Maxwell is completely equipped from the clear vision, ventilating windshield at the front to the spare tire carrier at the rear.

Maxwell Company's Guarantee of Service to Maxwell Owners

s backed by a more reliable service than that guaranteed every Maxwell owner. Scores of Maxwell dealers in every part of this o give expert advice—to make adjustments and to supply new parts at reasonable prices.

l Dealers' Service Organization is perfected and completed by the great Maxwell Service Station in Windsor, Ont. The main offices ell Motor Company in Detroit, U. S. A., are within comparatively short distance of many points in Canada. This in itself means ent parts to Canadian Maxwell dealers and owners. Maxwell Service is one of the great advantages enjoyed by Maxwell owners.

RAPID AND FIERCE BLOWS.

It is said that German troops with heavy guns, aeroplanes and Zeppelins, are already passing through the valley of the River Adige, in the direction of Verona, and that rapid and fierce blows will be delivered almost immediately at the Italian centre. This, the Germans doubtless believe, would serve to hold off an Italian advance from the Province of Venice, where the flat nature of the country would give the Italians a greater chance of success.

Thruout Austria and Germany there is bitter denunciation of Italy, which for the moment has replaced England as the most hated enemy. In the allied countries, on the other hand Italian intervention is hailed with delight and in the Italian quarters of London and Paris, there have been enthusiastic demonstrations and cheering farewells to the Italians leaving for home to join the colors.

A parcel of socks was sent to Belleville on Saturday last, for the reserve, for the men of the 39th Batt. C.E.F., who it is understood will soon be leaving for over-seas.

Another case is in preparation for the University Base Hospital, (Toronto), in order to include all the generous contributions for that institution.

As a result of the Queen's University shower, (No. 5 Stationary Hospital) held under our auspices yesterday, cases are being prepared for shipment. The first will be packed and despatched on Saturday, 29th inst.

Our sincere thanks are herewith tendered Mrs. Stover, of Violet, who sent us in 5 pairs of socks last Saturday. These were immediately included in the parcel above referred to for Belleville. Mrs. Stover has knit about 20 pairs of socks for us.

Our work-meeting, with afternoon tea, will continue as heretofore every Thursday, when we are glad to welcome all friends and workers, the need for the soldier being as great as ever.

The committee room will also be open each Saturday from 2.30 to 5.30 p.m.

A MAMMOTH SUGAR REFINERY.

Seventeen Thousand Tons of Concrete.

St. John N. B. boasts of having at least one great building that may be truly termed "as solid as a rock". This is the Atlantic Sugar Refineries, which required two years in the building. Seventeen thousand tons of concrete and three thousand tons of steel were required in its construction, and it is recognized as being not only a credit to Canada, but also the most up-to-date plant of its kind on the continent.

Some of the Machinery, which was designed expressly for this refinery is almost human in its working. This is particularly true of the machines which fill the two and five pound cartons of LANTIC GRANULATED SUGAR. These machines fold and seal the cardboard cartons, and weigh each one so that the carton contains the full weight of sugar as stamped on the outside, and all this without being touched by human hands. The Atlantic Refineries also contain many other interesting devices for the refining and purification of sugar, which enable this complete plant to have an output of one million pounds of sugar a day, or a yearly output of three hundred million pounds of sugar.

Only cane sugar will be used in the Atlantic Refineries so that those who buy LANTIC SUGAR either in cartons or the 10, 20 or 100 pound bags will be certain to obtain the very finest granulated cane sugar refined under the most sanitary conditions.

CANADIAN JUBILEE SINGERS COMING.

The Original Canadian Jubilee Singers will give an entertainment in the Napanee Town Hall on Friday evening, June 4th. This famous concert company is being brought to Napanee under the auspices of Argyle Lodge, No. 212, I.O.O.F.

This is a concert company of the Highest Order, not an aggregation of "Ragtime Artists" or "Cake Walkers." They will present plantation melodies and ullabies, sacred and secular duets, trios, quartettes and choruses.

The Canadian Jubilee Singers have been giving their concerts for the last thirty-five years, and have appeared in practically every town and city on the American and European continents.

From Collingwood, Ont., we get the following report:

An enjoyable concert was given in the Methodist church last Saturday evening under the auspices of the Young People's Society, when the Canadian Jubilee Singers provided a program of sweet and quaint numbers, greatly pleasing an audience of about three hundred persons, despite the fact of its being Saturday evening. The various numbers were well received and the company were exceedingly generous with encores, which the continued hearty applause at times brought forth. The Canadian Jubilee Singers are justly entitled to a crowded house should they come over this line in the future.—Collingwood, Gnt., Enterprise.
